VOL. 6.—No. 169. BOSTON, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 7, 1909. ONE CENT.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Sept. 7.—Commander Robert E. Peary, who reached the North Pole on April 6 last, completely discredits the reputed success of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, according to dispatches received here from Peary to-day. Peary claims distinctly that he was the first to reach the Pole. According to the dispatches, he found no trace of Dr. Cook having reached farthest north.

It is claimed that Dr. Cook did not get anywhere near the Pole, because he had not sufficient equipment for such an undertaking.

The dispatches from Peary's party state that Cook went west of all previous routes to the Pole, and that he did so with a motive—passing through that part of the uncharted Arctic so that there could be no check on his alleged observations.

HARRIMAN IN ICE FOR 105 FEVER

ARDEN, N. Y., Sept. 7.—The condition of E. H. Harriman is so serious, it was learned to-day, that his physician, Dr. Lyle, and two nurses, were up all night with the financier at Tower Hill, the Harriman residence on the top of the mountain. The family was also awake all night, the mansion being lighted up until dawn.

Ward was received from an authentic source to-day that Mr. Harriman had been given iced baths throughout the night and his temperature is 105 degrees. Several boxes billed "special," about which the train baggage men would make no statement, other than they came from a New York hospital, arrived to-day. They were taken to the Harriman house by automobile.

Roland Harriman, son of the stricken King, came to Arden in one of the fully autos for the mail this afternoon.

"How is your father?" he was asked.

"I don't know," he replied. "I have not been allowed to see him to-day."

At the Union Pacific offices in New York to-day an important conference was held between Judge Robert S. Lovett, a number of the traffic officials of the railroad and representatives of the Harriman banking interests. It was denied by Judge Lovett that the conference was called to do with the condition of Mr. Harriman, but from another source it was learned that telephone communication had been established with the country estate of Mr. Harriman.

Former Governor Benjamin B. Odell, Jr., one of the closest personal friends of Mr. Harriman, arrived at Arden from Newburg to-day. Mr. Odell admitted that he considered Mr. Harriman a "very sick man." Otherwise he would not discuss his visit.

Upon the best information obtainable it is believed that the attack that caused a relapse was occasioned by a sudden change of temperature or an indiscretion in diet, which the sick man in his weakened condition was unable to throw off.

On account of the patient's long illness and his extreme weakness there are fears that his life may be in danger through mere exhaustion or heart failure.

BEGIN WORK ON NEW PLAYGROUND

Residents of Ward 17 are jubilant over the fact that work has been begun on the new playground site on Norfolk avenue, for which there has been agitation for the last ten years and which was settled by Mayor Hibbard a few months ago, when he signed an order authorizing the expenditure of $80,000 for such a purpose.

ANGER RESTORES DUMB MAN'S TALK

LACROSSE, Wis., Sept. 7.—Speechless for forty years, George Purdy, an old soldier living at Dakota, a village near here, became so enraged to-day at an Masonic body, of which he is a member, by John Beach, head of a religious organization known as the Rev. Agaths that he denounced Bach in vigorous language. He accompanied this recovery with physical assaults upon the Rev. Mr. Beach.

TAFT CUP TAKEN BY JOYETTE

MARBLEHEAD, Sept. 7.—The New York sonder boat Joyette won the race with the Ellen of the Boston Yacht Club to-day. To the Joyette goes the Taft cup and the Ellen gets the Draper trophy. The finish of the international contest was signalled by a great outburst of enthusiasm on shore and in the harbor.

The little Joyette came in just nineteen second ahead of her rival. The time of the finish was:

Joyette	1:39:50
Ellen	1:40:09

The Joyette's crew consists of Captain W. Swan Butler and Whiting and Charles D. Mower. The boat was built by G. M. Smith of New York. The sailors on the Ellen were Captain Charles P. Curtis, Jr., Robert W. Emmons and Charles P. Curtis, Jr. The boat was designed by E. A. Boardman and built by the David Fenton Company of Manchester.

The visiting Germans who participated in the match and the American yachtsmen are to be the guests of President Taft on Thursday at luncheon, when the cups will be presented by him.

Joyette Leads in First Round.

In the beat to the windward mark the Ellen piloted higher and made fewer tacks than the Joyette, but the New York boat was favored more by puffs of wind and turned the mark 25 seconds ahead of the Ellen. In the run home, however, the Ellen picked up, and when they turned for the second boat to windward she had gained eleven seconds on the leader.

The wind was doing its best to start out the second round, and the experts predicted that the Ellen would pass the Joyette unless there was a decrease in the breeze. The time of the first round was:

	First mark.	Actual time.	Second mark.	Actual time.
Joyette...	11.54.40	45.40	12.24.45	30.40
Ellen.....	11.55.05	45.35	12.25.54	30.54

Test of Seamanship.

The yachtsmanship of the two crews were tested when the little boats started on the second round. It was a pretty race down the coast, with very little difference between the competitors. Rounding the third mark the Joyette seemed to have a little the best of it, and when the start home for the finish was made she was twenty seconds ahead of the Ellen. The time at the third mark was: Joyette, 1.05.45; Ellen, 1.07.05.

Thousands of dollars changed hands on the result of to-day's race.

RACERS OUT FOR RECORDS

LOWELL, Sept. 7.—The speed cracks of the world in their giant automobiles are this afternoon trying on the Merrimack Valley course to break every record for fast driving made by man for a mile straightaway.

Barney Oldfield, the wonderful driver who doesn't know what fear is, the holder of speed records, is one of the racers here. He makes no claims. "Watch me," is all he says. Oldfield, in his huge machine, believes that he can lower the record.

Walter Christie, one of the most speed-mad and daring drivers who ever forced a car at breakneck pace, is another of those who are competing with Oldfield for the world's new straightaway mile record. Christie is confident that he can smash the record.

Besides Oldfield and Christie there are many other drivers who have earned the right through previous performances to vie with these two speed annihilators. They know the glory will be all the greater if they win from these two fearless champions, and they are urging their cars to top speed and taking every chance with the turns who are known as crafty drivers.

Track or weather conditions could not be better. The speedway is in perfect shape for the supreme test. Early today the greater number of the drivers who are competing for the world's record took their cars out for a final tuning up before the contest began.

AUTO CRASH STARTS FLOOD

Mrs. William E. Fay of No. 43 Trenton street; Frank Ditmars of No. 19 Harlem street, and John Wells of No. 102 Westville street, all of Dorchester, were badly shaken up this afternoon at 1:15 when two automobiles in which they were riding collided at Park, Thane and Whitfield streets.

Leslie, who is chauffeur for George W. Simonds of No. 49 Richmond street, was driving a big Rambler car up Park street on his way to Washington. He was going at a lively clip. Ditmars, the Fays' chauffeur, was driving a Ford runabout, in which Mrs. Fay was seated, up Whitfield street, toward Thane and right angles to Park.

The pay car rammed the Simonds on the side track, driving it across the curb and smashing a big street hydrant. Shaken up as they were, both cars careened and leaped to the street, for the water spurted all over them like a geyser.

The Simonds car was badly wrecked and the two machine, locked together by the force of the collision, were thoroughly soaked. The city water department did not get the water shut off from the spouting hydrant for fully half an hour.

STRATHCONA HURT IN CRASH

WINNIPEG, Sept. 7.—Lord Strathcona, although compelled to wear his arm in a sling, is recovering to-day from an accident which might have cost him his life.

While driving near Vernon, B. C., on Saturday, his team became unmanageable and ran away. At a turn in the road Lord Strathcona and his companion, former Mayor Megaw of Vernon, were thrown. His lordship was badly bruised and Mr. Megaw had a leg broken. News of the accident reached here today. The couple were en route for Lord Aberdeen's fruit farm.

Lord Strathcona is the Canadian High Commissioner in England. He was to have charged meanwhile the liberties of all Canadians by a recent gift of $250,000 to promote the physical and military training of youths in the Canadian public schools.

WIFE TRUTHFUL, HUSBAND FINED

Because Mrs. Michael P. McDonough of A and Third streets, South Boston, refused to tell a lie to-day, her husband was made to pay a $5 fine by Judge Edward L. Logan in the South Boston Police Court.

Policeman John Gregg charged Michael with profanity. The argument said that Michael, with several other men, were standing at A and Third streets, yesterday, and that when he approached to make them move on McDonough said:

"Here comes the cop with the big feet."

Gregg didn't like this affront, so he followed Michael home, where he asked him what he meant. He said the reply he received was more than forceful—it was profane. So he arrested McDonough.

To-day Michael denied the charge, but when his wife was called she said the policeman had spoken the truth.

MAYOR BROWN BEFORE JURORS

LOWELL, Sept. 7.—Mayor George H. Brown appeared before the Grand Jury in its sitting here to-day, but nothing has been made public regarding the case. The fact that he was a witness has aroused the greatest interest and curiosity. Many citizens expect sensational developments to follow. The indicting body only took up Lowell cases to-day, it is understood.

OPERA PLACE TO BE LAID OUT

After a conference with Joseph Balch, a real estate expert representing Elkan D. Jordan, and the directors of the Boston Opera Company, Mayor Hibbard this afternoon affixed his signature to the Street Commissioners' order for the laying out and construction of opera places.

The Mayor arrived at this decision after he had "Reggie" Rams consider the proposition, and the latter had reported that the city would gain nothing by not accepting the offer of Mr. Jordan and the directors of the opera company.

Work on the new thoroughfare will be begun at once. It will be 250 feet long and run from Huntington avenue to opposite Opera place, and under advantageous considerations for the purchase of such patrons it will open up undeveloped land upon which betterments can be assessed. The opera company and the land to the city for $12,375, one-half of the assessed valuation, with the understanding that no betterment taxes will be levied on the property. The street will be finished early in the spring, time for the completion of the opera house.

WALK FENCED OFF IN FEUD

BROCKTON, Sept. 7.—When the people of the residential section of this city reached Warren avenue and Pleasant street to-day they were shocked to find a large section of the sidewalk fenced off, so that they had to take the middle of the street. Posted on the new fence was this notice:

"Notice to the Public: For over two years I have been trying to make a settlement on this land taken by the city for this sidewalk, they making use of the former sidewalk for the street. It is not my desire to antagonize the public, but under the circumstances I am obliged to do so, as I am the owner of and pay taxes on this land.

Respectfully,
"L. M. REYNOLDS."

The city two years ago took seven feet of the land of Mr. Reynolds for the sidewalk, and the matter has not been settled yet as to his compensation. Mayor Kent took the question up to-day, and in the meantime pedestrians, among them the good shoe operatives near by, are dodging the fence into the street.

COCAINE HABIT IS RAPIDLY GROWING

[From the Boston Journal.]

"It would disappoint you," said Deputy Superintendent Cain, the other day, in discussing the prevalence which the cocaine habit has at present, "to see the number of persons of high standing in the community who are using it. I met a prominent lawyer the other day, and noticed him sniffing a white powder from a little vial. I glanced at the label on the bottle and resolved, like the fool that I sometimes am, despite the fact that I was hired as a cocaine cure, 'I know it,' answered the attorney, 'but I enjoy the sensation it gives.'

POLICE SEARCH FOR FIREBUGS

The police of South Boston are investigating three fires which they declare were of incendiary origin. They all occurred in the same thickly settled tenement district, were rung in from the same box and happened within a few hours of each other.

Box No. 129 was pulled at 3:32 yesterday afternoon for a fire in the cellar of the apartments of Chief Engineer Dooling's building, No. 11 H street, owned by the Dorney estate. The damage was trivial. As the firemen were leaving the box was rung for a blaze in the first floor of the uncompleted two-story frame building at 14 Pallor street. The loss was $500. Early to-day a new shed in the carpenter shop of John White in the same district. The damage was $50.

REMOVAL OF LYNN CROSSINGS BEGUN

LYNN, Sept. 7.—After an agitation of twenty years, the work of abolishing the grade crossings of the Boston & Maine Railroad in Lynn was formally started under the supervision of Benjamin W. Rossell, traffic manager of the road. The work will cost nearly a million dollars, and will be borne by the city, the Boston & Maine and the Boston and Northern. Mayor Bird is largely responsible for the action of the crossings problem. The grades will be patterned after those in Malden. The Fayette street crossing will be seventeen feet high.

Dr. Cook Cables to American His Congratulations to Peary

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 7.—To the Editor of the Boston American: Hurrah for Peary! It is now surely all American. I am proud of him and join with my fellow countrymen in three cheers. I have always admired Mr. Peary's courage and have been impressed by his ability, and can only say, three cheers for him and the Stars and Stripes. (Signed) DR. FREDERICK A. COOK.

Peary Heard of Cook's Success.

These dispatches tend to prove that Peary heard of Cook's reported success either at Etah or Upernavik in Greenland. Dr. Cook preceded Commander Peary past these two points on the return trip, the commander following on the Roosevelt.

The Roosevelt was in good condition and her crew in fine health, Captain Bartlett wired. He also reported that the schooner Jeanie, carrying supplies for the expedition, had met them off the coast of Greenland.

The Roosevelt is expected to reach Chateau Bay, Labrador, today, from which point it is expected a more detailed account of Peary's discovery will be received.

Peary's complete report of his triumph will give facts and figures to prove his claim that he was the first man to reach the Pole.

The main point of all the news received from Peary to-day is his denial of Cook's claim.

Peary will land at Chateau Bay, Labrador, early this afternoon.

He has notified his friends in New York to cable his claim as discoverer of the Pole to all the geographical societies of the world.

PEARY CABLES NEW MESSAGES

LONDON, Sept. 7.—A news agency here to-day received a telegram from St. John's, N. F., in which Commander Robert E. Peary claims that he was the first man to discover the North Pole.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Two cable messages from Commander Robert E. Peary, who reached the North Pole on April 6th, were received in New York to-day. One addressed to Herbert L. Bridgman was as follows:

Notify geographical societies I have discovered the Pole.

The other to his publishers stated:

I have the Pole. Best regards.

This last message is taken by many to mean that Commander Peary intends disputing Dr. Frederick A. Cook's claim to being the first to discover the Pole.

Commander Peary, it is understood, has claimed the North Pole for the United States.

General Thomas Hubbard of No. 60 Wall street today received the following cablegram:

Indian Harbor, Via Cape Race, N. F., Sept. 7.

Thanks your assistance, the 300 years' search of North Pole is ended. Pole occupied by the club's expedition April 6. The Roosevelt returns uninjured. (Signed) PEARY.

General Hubbard replied:

Robert E. Peary, Chateau Bay, Labrador:

This is the best news of the century and this century is short; congratulations for the achievement. HUBBARD.

The Navy Department was today sent the following dispatch from Brooklyn:

Commander Peary telegraphs from Indian Harbor, Labrador:

North Pole reached April 6 by Peary Arctic Club expedition under my command.

(Signed) BRIDGMAN, Secretary.

Mr. Bridgman wired the news to the Secretary of the Navy and ex-President Roosevelt at Nairobi, East Africa. The message to Mr. Roosevelt was as follows:

HIBBARD BACK AT CITY HALL

Mayor Hibbard sat at his desk today for the first time since July 14. He was in his office for a short time, but serious business was to be kept of health.

"Yes, I am feeling fine," he said, "I'll be able to tackle as much boiler as ever by [illegible]."

The Mayor looked well. He said he had [illegible] with a local specialist [illegible] to-day.

4,000 SEE AERONAUT TAKE FATAL LEAP

PEKALB, Ill., Sept. 7.—Four thousand persons saw Fred Rinker, thirty-two years old, fall 1,000 feet from his balloon while making an ascension at Egyptian Park here. He received instantly fatal injuries. Rinker, it is said, left the parachute at the last moment before he reached the ground. Rinker had made more than 100 ascensions.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, POET, GOES BROKE

LONDON, Sept. 7.—Stephen Phillips, the noted poet and dramatist, who was to have appeared in court here to-day in bankruptcy proceedings, was not present when his case was called, and the scrapping proceedings was again delayed. It has been unable to present sufficient funds to get to London from Bradford, where he has been staying. Among Phillips's most famous works are "Paola and Francesca," "Herod" and "Nero." He attributed his insolvency to the failure of [illegible] to [illegible] cent plays.

WARSHIP TO ESCORT PEARY HOME FROM NORTH

PEARY, IN NEW CABLES, SAYS COOK DID NOT COME NEAR THE POLE

"North Pole discovered April 6 by Peary Arctic Club's expedition, in command of Peary."

No reply has been received from the ex-President.

Messages have been sent by Mr. Bridgman to the Royal Geographical societies of London, Brussels and Rome.

Henry Fairchild Osborn, president of the American Museum of Natural History, made public today the following eulogium which he had received from Peary:

The Pole is ours. Am bringing large amount of material for museum.

PEARY.

George Crocker of the Peary Arctic Club, received the following message from the explorer today:

Indian Harbor, via Cape Ray, Sept. 7.

The pole is ours. Thank you.

PEARY.

Captain Bartlett of the Roosevelt sent the following dated Indian Harbor to a friend in this city:

It is accomplished. Kind regards to all.

BARTLETT.

PEARY TO HUNT FOR SOUTH POLE NEXT

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 7.—The men and problems of success to attended him in the North

Commander H. Ellerslie, comptroller of the currency, in discussing Peary's discovery of the North Pole, said today:

"Peary's discovery should be an end to the skepticism of those who have been inclined to doubt the discoveries of Cook. While the public generally is inclined to accept the claims of Peary, there are many who will doubt if the announcement has been made until conclusive evidence is presented by both."

Rear Admiral Stanton, Secretary Reynolds said today: "It is very gratifying to me, the announcement that Commander Peary has discovered the North Pole. The chief fact that sets he and Dr. Cook are Americans. There is no question in my mind that the North Pole discovery by an American, and not by a foreigner. There are numerous points of interest in connection with the discovery. There are numerous points of interest in connection with the discovery. There are numerous points of interest in connection with the discovery

COOK'S RECORDS CONVINCE DANISH SCIENTISTS

GREATEST DANISH EXPERT CONVINCED BY DR. COOK'S DIARY

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 7.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook has promised to submit all his charts, figures and instruments to the scientific magnificos and faculty of the University of Denmark the Royal University of Copenhagen, a body of scientists thoroughly familiar with polar exploration. "I know I am right," he says, "and I am confident their verdict will sustain the accuracy of my observations."

The University of Denmark was created in the seventeenth century by royal patent. Only on extremely rare occasions does the faculty confer honorary degrees, but Cook is to be made an honorary professor.

His diary was shown last night to the senior magnificos. The calculations having been extracted and examined, the verdict announced the verdict that the explorer undoubtedly reached the North Pole.

Professor Torp, the rector magnificus, in a statement to newspapers this morning, today said:

"At Minister Egan's suggestion I went to the legation in my capacity of head of the university to examine Dr. Cook very closely in regard to his claims. Mr. Egan told me the American government was desirous of getting official confirmation of his statements. The Danish Geographical Society also wished to be sure of its ground before taxing Dr. Cook the distinguished honors which are due him.

"The examination took place on American soil, meaning the legation. Dr. Cook and Mr. Egan were present. Dr. Cook passed the test perfectly although the examination was of an intricate and scientific character. There was not a detail or question put before him to which he failed to reply in the most satisfactory way.

"As there were certain questions of a special astronomical nature with which I myself was not sufficiently acquainted, I called in our greatest astronomical authority, Professor Strangren, who put an exhaustive series of mathematical, technical and natural scientific questions to Dr. Cook, based particularly on those of his contentions on which some doubts had been voiced.

"Dr. Cook answered all to our full satisfaction. He showed no hesitancy or excitement at any time. There was, therefore, that there is no justification for anybody to throw the slightest doubt on the claim to have reached the Pole and he assume by which he did it. Professor Strangren and I are so entirely satisfied with the evidence that at this afternoon's meeting of the mathematical and natural science faculty I proposed conferring on Dr. Cook the title of honorary professor of the Copenhagen University."

Great Triumph To-night.

"Eleven members voted for and only one against the appointment, which was immediately ratified by the Minister, who will now have it signed by the King. The official appointment will take place tomorrow."

Dr. Cook's greatest triumph will come to-night on the occasion of the reception and lecture under the auspices of the Royal Geographical Society, which will be held in Odd Fellows Hall, as the chamber of the Geographical Society is entirely too small for the purpose. The affair will be the most brilliant in the scientific history of the Scandinavian State.

The entire royal family will be present, and there will be representatives of the army, navy and all learned bodies. The Crown Prince will pay the highest honor of the Geographical Society on Dr. Cook's arrival, and afterward Dr. Cook will go to the balcony and witness a torchlight procession of Danish students, wearing historic costumes. It is expected that fully 15,000 persons, including many of the powers of renown, will be present at the lecture. Perhaps Dr. Nordenskjold will be present.

Explains by Huge Map.

Three men have painted a giant map of the polar regions, measuring nine square meters. For the purpose of making the map Dr. Cook has given his original chart, on which every detail is marked. The original will be placed in the archives of the Geographical Society.

Professor Gulsson, secretary of the society, himself an author and explorer, said that Dr. Cook would prove once for all where he had been and what he had seen. He added: "We have specially requested him to give most particular and full stories of his journey when near the Pole and to tell all about the temperature. He has been especially asked to dilate on the two Eskimos. We want to know what they said and thought when told they had reached the Pole."

Following the definite statement by Director Strongren of the Copenhagen Observatory that Dr. Cook has proved conclusively his claim, Dr. Cook had a conference lasting two hours with Captain Sverdrup, the famous explorer, concerning the ship. It was because of Director Strongren's expression of belief in Dr. Cook's report that Captain Sverdrup examined the American's diary in detail. He declared he was perfectly convinced.

Since the attestation of Dr. Cook's feat he has spent his time in comparative seclusion, mostly in the flat of the American Legation, where he has taken temporary abode. There he has been besieged by a mob of tourists who have been clamoring to see him.

"I'M NO DOUBTER," SAYS COOK; GIVES PEARY ALL PRAISE

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 7.—Dr. Frederick Cook to-day gave Lieutenant Robert E. Peary full credit for his discovery of the Pole.

"I am glad," said he enthusiastically, "that Peary's efforts were successful and I am more than glad to know that the second man to reach the Pole was an American.

It is doubtful if Lieutenant Peary found any of the documents which I left at the Pole, because the ice is of a drifting character, and in a year's time the floe upon which I planted the records will be turning my flag and our record probably would have washed away.

Dr. Cook heard with the keenest interest every word bearing on Peary's achievements. Cook has cabled his congratulations to Peary, and to-day showed more excitement, apparently, over the polar discovery than he did over his own.

He called the following message to President Taft:

"I am proud of Peary."

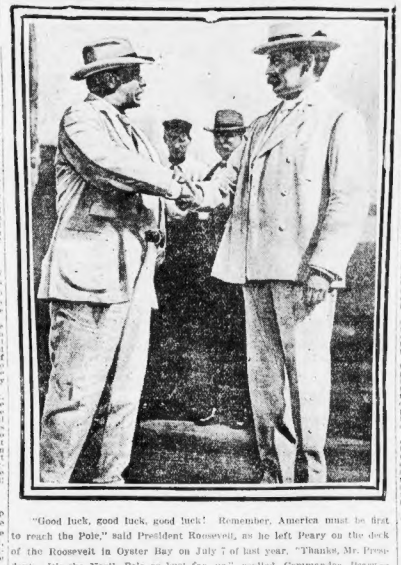
Dr. Cook discussed at length the wonderful feat of Peary, now wonderful in his eyes because Cook announced with conviction that no other explorer could attain the "Great Nail" unless the former the western route blazed by him self.

"If Mr. Peary sent a dispatch from Indian Harbor, Labrador, that he had discovered the North Pole, I am sure that he has accomplished his life's ambition," said Cook with emphasis.

"I am proud of him and John with my fellow countrymen in three cheers. The Danish dispatches read to me sounds like Peary's Stars and Stripes.

"NORTH POLE OR BUST!"

President Roosevelt and Commander Peary, taken as former lode explorer good-by on his successful voyage.



"Good luck, good luck, good luck!" Remember, America must be first to reach the Pole," said President Roosevelt, as he left Peary on the deck of the Roosevelt in Oyster Bay on July 7 of last year. "Thanks, Mr. President. It's the North Pole or bust for us," replied Commander Peary.—From conversation between President Roosevelt and Commander Peary just before snapshot was made.

DANISH PAPER SAYS COOK FEARED PEARY

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 7.—An amazing story was published to-day by the Danish newspaper the Ekstrabladet to the effect that Dr. Frederick A. Cook was greatly excited during the six weeks he spent in the Pedersminde colony in Greenland, apparently fearing the arrival of a ship.

"If I meet Peary I know he will shoot me," was the expression put into Dr. Cook's mouth by the Ekstrabladet.

This sensational story created much excitement throughout the city, especially in scientific circles.

MIGHTY WELCOME A WAITING PEARY

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—Commander Robert E. Peary is hurrying home with the news of his polar exploits. When he arrives, it will be America that extends the world's greeting. A welcome such as never before has been accorded a private citizen will be given the explorer.

The initial steps were taken to-day by the Peary Arctic Club to welcome the "Master of the North." The Arctic Club, the Explorers' Club of America, the Peary Arctic Club and the Geographical Society will likely unite with the numerous civic, national and scientific bodies representing every section of the United States, to give such a welcome as will establish a new epoch in such affairs in North America.

It is almost certain that a United States warship or a gunboat will be sent north to convey the Roosevelt home. The preliminary steps to have the United States Government take an active part in the greeting of her distinguished citizen and naval officer have been set afoot.

New York, even in her bigness, will be crowded with those who will take part in the reception of the Arctic hero. Guns in the harbor will belch their salute and gaily decorated launches and pleasure craft of every variety will fill the water of the bay when the Roosevelt comes sailing home. With the flag of the United States at every peak, with the cheering of multitudes and the electric thrill of enthusiasm in the very air, the ovation to Peary will likely eclipse anything of the kind ever done before.

Following the announcement that he would arrive here within ten days, the fullest possible speed was made to-day in the plans for the homecoming. Aside from the people's display, the social side will play a prominent part and there will be dinners and banquets and lectures and every other known form of entertainment.

It is confidently expected that Commander Peary will hasten to Washington immediately after his arrival here, to be before the Navy Department the official report of his success. But this will not prevent the noisy reception which will, nevertheless, echo from New York to San Francisco. Just how long Commander Peary planned to stay at Chateau Bay, where the Roosevelt is scheduled to arrive to-day, is not known, but the Commander desires to get home with all the speed possible.

'WELL, WELL!' SAYS EDISON; 'POLE? GREAT!'

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—"So the North Pole has really been discovered at last?" said Thomas A. Edison, grand master of electrical invention and research. "Well, well! That's a great thing. And the best of it is an American is the discoverer. Isn't it wonderful? What will the country call do? Peary of a country, eh? You bet it is! The man who doesn't think so ought to be kicked out."

Mr. Edison was sitting in the quaint little cafe in Briarcliff lodge when he heard that Dr. Cook had reached the Pole and for which explorers had contended for years.

"This year has certainly been a very good one from a scientific point of view. Look at what it has witnessed in the successful employment of the aeroplane, balloon, dirigible balloon, improvement in wireless telegraphy and other things that have come to the front. Peary will be regarded as scientific research. Yet these things are not marvelous. They are but minor trifles in comparison with what we ought to have accomplished. What we may be some day will be accomplished. Notwithstanding all we have won we are but children of our power in the face of the depths of nature and to learn how little we are grasping, but glimpsing in the dark we shall succeed little by little. The spirit of the unknown."

"The trouble is, our senses are limited to five. We are deaf to many sounds at present we cannot comprehend one half that is going on in the realms of nature. We cannot discover anything and the force that is behind the power. In science in contact with something that has produced light or heat or sound, or some thing, we can observe feel, see, or taste or smell.

"So it is regarding the discoveries and evolution of scientific products that have been made this year, undoubtedly the most important up to date is the conquest of the air. But, although many forms of aerial machinery have been devised, still we have a long road to travel before they attain perfection. Until they have learned the secret of safe culture they cannot say they have mastered the art of flying.

"POLE IS SURELY OURS," DECLARES ANTHONY FIALA

By ANTHONY FIALA,
Commander of the Ziegler Polar Expedition of 1903.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—With the news from Peary that he has "nailed the Stars and Stripes to the North Pole," we have the double assurance that America has right by discovery and occupation to this interesting region. After all these months of effort to find the northern axis it has at last been explored by two Yankees.

Dr. Cook, on April 21, 1908, had the wonderful experience of being the first man to place his feet upon the northern centre of the earth, and again on April 6, a year later, commander Peary stepped the same satisfaction of unfurling the American flag to the winds of the North Pole.

Of course, neither could know of each other's success at the time, but my results placed at the Pole could not have any permanence unless an island or a continent had been found and I am sure success rested under an imperishable monument of rock.

But on the drifting polar pack a mark or cylinder would soon be moved from its true position at the axis and be drifted over with the snows that pack as hard as stone in the nouveau Arctic storms.

There is also the fact that all dark objects on ice or snow absorb the heat of the sun, and melt their way down through the ice until out of sight.

So those of us who are looking for the confirmation of Cook's discovery by the return of Peary are likely to be disappointed, for there is very little chance that the brass cylinder that Dr. Cook left at the point where the axis crosses has been found or ever will be found.

The same fate will befall the staff upon which Peary nailed his American flag, after the banner itself had been blown away.

WHY CHILDREN RECORD.—Dr. Phelps Sunday, Amherst, will give in detail the latest discovery of surgeons that mortality depends on teeth, eyes, ears and nose.

NOTED EUROPEAN SCIENTISTS SURE DR. COOK FOUND THE POLE

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—The following question was asked of two noted European scientists by cable yesterday, answers being appended:

Does your society accept the conclusions of Danish explorers and geographers that Dr. Cook reached the North Pole?

Hamburg, Sept. 6.

The Georgraphical Society in Hamburg does not doubt that Cook has reached the North Pole. We are preparing a splendid meeting.

DOCTOR FRIEDRICHSEN,
First Secretary.

Brussels, Sept. 6.

The Royal Belgian Geographical Society has communicated to me telegraphic question. Cook's declarations, as I read them, contain nothing improbable. I accept, consequently, his discovery of the North Pole.

NOTED SURGEON OF PITTSBURG AT POLE WITH PEARY

PITTSBURG, Pa., Sept. 7.—Two natives of New Kensington, a county suburb, Dr. Goodsell, surgeon of the second expedition, and George Bole, a mill worker, are with Peary on his roundabout trip to the Pole. Dr. Goodsell stands high in his profession, and has served as surgeon and physician of the Allegheny Valley Medical Society. He is author of "Breast Measurements Applications Applied to Physical Development and the Science Thereof," and "The Science of Self Diagnosis."

WRIGHTS BUY BIG PARK FOR FLIGHTS

SPRINGFIELD, O., Sept. 7.—Wilbur and Orville Wright have purchased more than one square of farm land west of here, and at Kitty Hawk, N. C. The machine is the proper near Tippecanoe City, as a site for a park in of Messrs. H. Cooper of No. 660 Eighth to be used in experiments with aeroplanes, street and Harvey Bostwick of No. 1 Cher reported that the Wrights intend to erect ry Street. Bostwick was arrested in Lexington an aeroplane factory on the land. yesterday.

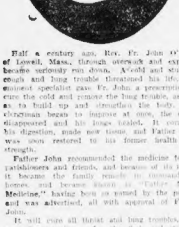
SPANISH TROOPS TWICE ROUT MOORS

MADRID, Sept. 7.—Official dispatches from Melilla to-day told of two Spanish victories against the Moors. General Aguilera's troops entered the Kabyles at Lobadera quarantine, leaving them back with heavy losses; one Spanish soldier was killed and a lieutenant and six were badly wounded. At Penon the Moors made a midnight sortie upon the blockhouse guarding the lines, but were repulsed by the garrison.

"JOY RIDER" HELD ON AUTO CHARGE

Judge Probate of the Charlestown District court to-day held Francis R. Harvey in $200 for a hearing September 15, on the charge of stealing an automobile valued at $1,000. The machine is the property of Joseph F. Cooper of No. 660 Eighth street, and Harvey borrowed it for a "joy ride." Harvey was arrested in Lexington yesterday.

STORY OF A DOCTOR'S PRESCRIPTION



Half a century ago, Rev. Fr. John O'Brien of Lowell, Mass., found a sick man who became seriously run down. A cold and stubborn cough and lung trouble threatened his life. An eminent physician gave Fr. John a prescription to cure the cold and remove the lung trouble, as well as to build up and strengthen the body. The physician began to improve at once, the cough disappeared and his lungs healed. It corrected his digestion, made new blood and Father John was soon restored to his former health and strength.

Father John recommended the medicine to his parishioners and friends, and because of its merits it became the family remedy in thousands of homes, and became known as "Father Johns Medicine," having been so named by the people, and was advertised, all with approval of Father John.

It will cure all throat and lung troubles, prevent Consumption, and make tired, weak people well if taken faithfully. It is not a patent medicine, and does not contain alcohol or poisonous drugs.

As a guarantee that the genuine Father John's Medicine is absolutely free from alcohol or opiates, it will be given to any charitable institution if it can be shown otherwise.

BLADDER TROUBLES NEED PROMPT ATTENTION.

Perhaps you don't know how much work is required of your kidneys and bladder or of how much importance they are. Do you know that on these important organs hinges good health? Many an apparently strong, healthy man or woman has been stricken without notice by serious kidney and bladder disease only to realize too late what might have been prevented with proper care and attention.

Some of the early symptoms of weak kidneys and bladder are backache, rheumatism, catarrh of the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints or muscles, at times have headache or indigestion, dizziness, sour stomach, a sallow complexion, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, sometimes feel as though you had enough to do, may have plenty of ambition, but no strength, get weak and waste away.

If you find you have some of the symptoms mentioned, you need just a remedy that will reach the seat of the disease and at the same time build up the system generally.

Such a remedy is Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. In thousands of cases it has accomplished just the work you need performed now.

Sample Bottle of Swamp-Root Free by Mail.

Send to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. It will convince anyone. You will also receive a booklet of valuable information, telling all about the kidneys and bladder. When writing, be sure and mention the Boston Daily American. For sale at all drug stores. Price fifty cents and one dollar.

NEW DESTROYER FASTEST ON SEA

BATH, Me., Sept. 7.—The torpedo boat destroyer Flusser has returned to Bath after her final government test, having maintained a speed of 30.46 knots an hour for the run, the contract calling for 28 knots an hour. It made the trip here from Boston in five hours and five minutes. President Hyde of the Bath Iron Works, which built the destroyer, stated that the craft had exceeded every requirement made of it by the Government, including the coal and water consumption tests and speed, and had shown herself the fastest naval vessel in the world not built for speed.

Four Snappy New Shows Lead the Way in Opening the Fall Dramatic Season

"Girl and Wizard" and "Gay Hussars" Please Musical Lovers.

"The Noble Spaniard," as played by Robert Edeson in his new comedy of that name at the Hollis Street Theatre, is a bold and inventive story. In it he wins Widow Nature, but thinks his husband is living. He would "whip the face of every man in Europe," as he says, to win her.

He mistakes two different men for her husband and challenges them. He chuckles and he laughs at her supposed relative. There is a fine complication all around, with much comedy resulting.

Gertrude Coghlan as Widow Nature was properly indignant at first. Then she displayed in a delightful way the gradual yielding to the importunities of love.

Verner Clarges made Lord Hugo Rossel in Judge and Lady Brondhurst mixed admirably into the farce. The stately and dignified manner of Lady Brondhurst impressed one inspired the gentle reader of the Spaniard was keenly relished by the audience.

Majestic.

Laughter and tears dwell closely and happily together in "The Girl and the Wizard," which had its first production at yesterday's Majestic matinee. Stan Bernard probably never had a better vehicle for his clever dialect and comedy work, or better opportunity to show his ability as a character actor. The play is a two-act romance of the American mountains by Hall Mackey. Lyrics by Robert B. Smith, and music by Julian Edwards. It has a stunning stage setting by Warlock.

Bernard as a skilful lapidary who, detached out of practical relations with mankind, makes the lives of his mountain people happy by lifting their burdens. He is a confirmed bachelor, and when his nephew, whom he raised, falls in love and forbids him to marry, and the two goes away to the war, William Hoeffle lost the part of the nephew, and he was in love with Fay Bettes, the daughter of Count Hugo Rossel. Miss Flora Parker was the girl, and the part of her scheming father was admirably acted by Morton Selton.

A woman who sat near the writer said that Miss Parker made the prettiest bride she had ever seen on the stage. Miss Kitty Gordon, as the prima donna of an opera company stranded in the mountains, sang several songs superbly, notably "The Blue Lagoon" and "The Butterfly."

Boston.

"The Gay Hussars," a military operetta in three acts, drew a large house at the Boston Theatre last night and made for itself a welcome that insures a most successful engagement here. The music is full of life and tuneful and of a character not often heard on the American stage. The operetta contains both a waltz and a two-step and yet differs radically from the "Merry Widow." The music is distinctively Hungarian in the love songs. Each part is well acted and capably presented. The singing is excellent. The stage setting is fully in keeping with the high grade of the performance, which is Henry W. Savage's first presentation in Boston this season.

Tremont.

Louis Mann in "The Man Who Stood Still, a four-act play by Jules Eckert Goodman, played to a delightful and crowded house at the Tremont Theatre last night. As the pioneering attraction of the season it found the selection of actor and play could not have been more happy. The production is one well worth the ability of William A. Brady and he splendidly keeps up his reputation. Comedy and pathos are skillfully woven together in the play, affording the star an excellent opportunity to display his talent, and he keeps the interest keyed to a high note from start to finish. The pleasures and the misfortunes of the peculiar people in everyday New York Kast Side life are faithfully revealed. Mr. Mann, "The Man Who Stood Still," is for the time a German watchmaker with a shop in the Bowery. He cannot absorb American methods. He is a sister, Matilda, and a daughter, Marie. Marie is the victim of a sham marriage. The father refuse to take his daughter back to his small won over by her child. She is finally befriended and the play ends happily for all concerned. Mr. Brady has supplied Mr. Mann with a support that is strong and well ensained. The play is bound to please Boston theatregoers.

Keith's.

If you want to hear a snappy, jingery song go to Keith's this week and hear Cecil Lean sing "He's a Fan! Fan!! Fan!!!" It makes you feel you are out on the bleachers watching the Red Sox wallop the Highlanders.

Besides the headliner, the Keith bill is a big number. There is that always welcome farcical sketch, The Hale Detectives, played by Byron and Langdon, in which the efficient pair sing that famous ballad, "I Lost Another Chance to Be a Hero."

Colonial.

"The Round Up," Edmund Day's musical drama of Western life, is at the Colonial Theatre for its third incision of Boston. Record-breaking audiences greeted two performances yesterday. It was "standing room only," and not much of that. The company and its presentation of the piece are fully up to the high standard set by the previous runs of the play in this city. The scenic effects, almost unique to Boston, Ripley Holmes, the new Miss Hanford as the leading woman, and Miss Sabinsky as has the physique and the voice for the part, are the features of the production. Miss Hanford as Ruth Elliott, Miss Sabinsky as Elsa Ehrlich, Ripley Holmes as Jim Elliott and Frederick Tyler as Tom Ehrlich are the principals who carry the burden of the play and they do it splendidly. Others in the cast are: Frank Lamb, Frank Bolton, Frank Bonner, Miss Lillian Kemble-Cooper, Miss Ethel Wright, Miss Ethel Lloyd, Miss Ethel Clifford, Miss Ethel Lloyd, Miss Ethel Clifford, Miss Ethel Lloyd, Miss Ethel Clifford

POPE WOULD NOT MOVE THE HOLY TOMB

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—The report that Pope Pius X. has taken steps to have the tomb which is held by the Catholic church to be the Holy Sepulchre, now in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, Jerusalem, transported to Italy is emphatically declared to be false. This denial, made by Mgr. Diomede Falconio, papal delegate to the United States, who returned to this city a few days ago after a visit to Rome, is final.

Monsignor Falconio asserted that the Pope would be the last person in the world to consent to the transfer of the tomb; that the Pontiff on more than one occasion has declared that any attempt to remove the Holy Sepulchre is sacrilege, and that he would personally arise, if necessary, and forcibly and effectively

CUBS LOSE EVERS FOR THREE DAYS

PITTSBURG, Sept. 7.—Johnny Evers of the Chicago Cubs, was suspended for three days today by President Heydler of the National League, and was not in the Cubs line-up when they tackled the Pirates in the great pennant fight this afternoon.

"Inexcusably bad language" was the charge upon which Heydler suspended the Tinker, in awakening the Cubs at the most critical moment of the pennant fight. Manager Chance told Zimmerman to prepare to play second base.

"We are in the fight just the same," said Chance. "It's a big handicap at this stage of the game, I admit, but we are strongest and fight harder when they have a handicap to overcome. The umpires always lay more to Klem than Evers did and I can prove it. Yet Charley was not even out of the game, while Evers drew their unpardonable ire. Well, we'll soon get out in front of the running. We will win the pennant just the same."

AMERICAN LEAGUE GROUNDS, Washington, Sept. 7.—The Red Sox opened battle against the Senators in the first battle of a three-game series this afternoon. The Washington fans do not now believe the Sox open Ed's have a chance for the pennant, basing their opinion on the unsatisfactory work of the team. No club that played the ball the Boston club has played the ball in the closing.

Lake's men, however, hope to make Chance eat his words here, taking from the Athletics and Detroits here a few at the same time. Then, after the Sox return to the East they will fight it out on home grounds. Schafer looked over the field and they are pretty against the Red Sox today here for the post month the visitors will play this country.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Sept. 7.—The last game of the series between the Doves and the Giants was staged this afternoon. Tonight the Boston Club returns home to finish out the week, and then they will leave for the South.

There was only a small crowd present today as New York fans have given up hope of seeing the pennant go from the Polo Grounds flagpole, and only the regulars came out to see the contest this afternoon. Manager Smith said his men would play hard along to the finish, as besides getting out of last place, He will use his regulars right out until the season ends in a few days.

With Matheson out of the way the Doves thought they had an even chance against the Giants, and they went after Tendler's game with lots of pepper.

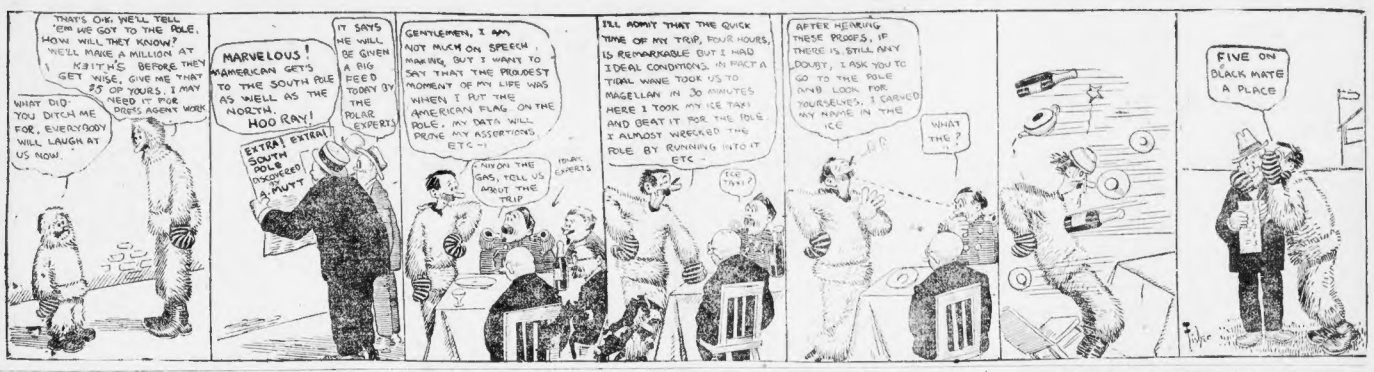
AUTO RACING MEN IN MILE DASHES AT LOWELL TO DAY

Extra! A. Mutt Claims to Have Discovered the South Pole — By "Bud" Fisher



BIG MONEY EARNED BY MAJOR CLUBS

There are clubs in the National and American leagues this year that will make over $150,000 on an investment not much greater than that sum, says Stallings of the Yankees.

"The game has outgrown all the prophecies—yes, all the ambitions—of the men who were foolhardy enough to start it.

"It wasn't long ago that 3,000 people at a weekday game was considered a big turnout. When we were well up in the race in midseason we were drawing 12,000 to 15,000 people a day in New York, and often on Saturdays had to turn away about 30,000 people that we were unable to accommodate.

"The Athletics, Red Sox, Pirates, Cubs, Tigers and Giants may make from $100,000 to $250,000 each this season.

"It is particularly hard for the latter to follow a low ball on a dark day, as was shown in the second game of the world's series between New York and the Athletics on the Polo Grounds. Christy Mathewson, who was on the mound for Connie Mack's men, is a pitcher who, when right, has a tremendous amount of speed. The Athletics managed to score a few runs for Bender early in the game, and with this lead there was no chance for the giants to catch up.

"Bender had the advantage of the gathering gloom, and this, coupled with his ability to keep his ball low, proved a stumbling block for the aggressive Giants.

SOUTHERN LEAGUE RESULTS

Montgomery 3, Little Rock 2 (first game); Montgomery 6, Little Rock 1 (second game).
Nashville 5, Memphis 4 (12 innings; 8, rain).
Memphis 6, Nashville 1 (11 innings; 8, rain).
New Orleans 5, Birmingham 1 (10 innings; 8, rain).
Atlanta 8, Mobile 1 (first game). Mobile 2, Atlanta 0 (second game, 7 innings, called).

HIGH BALLS NOT POPULAR TO PITCH

Addie Joss, baseball pitcher par excellence in the summer time and sporting editor in the off season, is of the opinion that a ban on successful high ball pitching is a thing of the past.

"There was a time," says Joss, "when it was the accepted theory that one of the requisites of the first-class pitcher was ability to keep the ball around the batter's neck.

"That is true when the man at bat is trying to pull off the bat and run plays. Formerly, when the batters kept their shots half high, it was pie for the batter to either step back or in, as the occasion required, and push or pull in the direction he wanted it to go. With the low ball it is different as the batter cannot gauge just where the ball any too well, and finds it a difficult matter to place the ball.

"It is particularly hard for the batter to follow a low ball on a dark day, as was shown in the second game of the world's series between New York and the Athletics on the Polo Grounds. Christy Mathewson, who was on the mound for Connie Mack's men, is a pitcher who, when right, has a tremendous amount of speed. The Athletics managed to score a few runs for Bender early in the game, and with this lead there was no chance for the giants to catch up.

"Bender had the advantage of the gathering gloom, and this, coupled with his ability to keep his ball low, proved a stumbling block for the aggressive Giants.

DISTANCE RACERS ARE RESTING FOR TERRIFIC 318 MILE AUTO RACE

By J. C. KERRISON.

LOWELL, Sept. 7.—All of the automobile drivers who hold motor racing records for fast long distance driving are resting in Lowell to-day, preparing for the nerve racking, mind-reeling wars of 318 miles which takes place in the Merrimac Valley course to-morrow.

The mechanics are busy. Every machine which is to take part in the great race of the meeting is being overhauled and critically inspected. Everything about them must be scanned and nothing which might cause a breakdown overlooked.

The men who are to guide the big cars for the 318 miles in the endurance struggle feel the race against time very spending the day as quietly as possible. They must be thoroughly rested, and ready for the strain of the continued run, for every hour at high speed is more wearing than can be imagined.

Brilliant Race Finish.

Burman, Chevrolet and Knipper, the former two driving Buicks, and the latter at the wheel of a Chalmers-Detroit, rabbeled by the lead in their respective classes in the first of the motor events at Lowell Automobile Club.

Knipper was of the pricest order, being brilliant and striking in the extreme. Starting in the fifth place, he held that position throughout, and Burman breaking the course record of fifty-three miles an hour established by his team-mate Strang in the contest last year.

The glory of Knipper was somewhat clouded by the filing of a protest on the ground that he did not carry his hood throughout the race, but this protest was not sustained.

The contest board refused to sustain the protest against Knipper after carefully considering all of the circumstances. The board decided that while Knipper's car had lost its hood the driver had recovered it as soon as possible and accordingly the protest was not allowed.

Spectacular Contest.

When viewed from a spectacular standpoint, the contests, three in number, were the most successful and brilliant this country has ever seen. At times there were twenty-two cars on the track. The crashes and duels were particularly interesting and frequent, so much so in fact that it leaves the 125,000 people who lined the 100 miles of the course very much in a perfect turmoil of excitement.

The daring, fearless drivers, with faces blackened by the oil from the roads, with lines of determination written on their faces, every nerve strained to the utmost, and desire each one thing, the goal of victory, dashed madly around the course, riding the turns and blind curves without a trace of fear.

Time and time again the cars went around the "chirpin" and some down the "dip of death" at seventy-five miles an hour, and not a single accident occurred at either of these places. The right engineers at Varnum and Dunbar avenues, and from the latter into the boulevard, proved the most disastrous on the entire route, at least five persons being injured at those points. None were seriously injured, however. The cars made those turns on two wheels, time and time again, and yet but two cars met with misfortune at either place.

WOLGAST IS FAVORITE OVER MAT BALDWIN

It's up to Matty Baldwin, the dapper little Charlestown featherweight, to stop the upward career of one Ad Wolgast, the hard hitting fighter from Milwaukee, who will be seen in the ring for the first time to-night in the local fans when this pair mixes up at the Armory A. A.

The duty of the job Baldwin has cut out for him is the biggest he has yet tackled. Wolgast retains the prestige of having given Ad Wilson a warm argument for ten rounds and not done the worst of it.

He is a hard-hitting lightweight, as he always weighs under the limit, and will step on the mat to meet Baldwin scaling 124 pounds.

The opening bout is one of eight rounds between Tom Foley of South Boston and Johnny Duff of the South End.

Harry Wood of Providence, better known as Jimmy Locher, will meet Kid Perron in the other bout, as Mike Glover claims he cannot get into condition.

Baseball News and Notes

Speculation of the Cubs in being able to meet Tinker at the right moment called them in tasked for out of five games by giants.

Arthur Fromme, leading artist, with the Reds, has been a most [illegible] pitcher.

Fromme is covering plenty of territory for the Giants and hitting the ball hard. If Artie can only battle in one game out of every [illegible] he will help the Giants. Not.

That [illegible] Chance has not let Chance or his fierce crew get, and indeed it does, the championship will have [illegible] themselves in a [illegible] as they did instead of the one many world's post-season games.

Bobby Byrne, local baseball man, has made [illegible] since he left Boston. Connieville, as Byrne is wont to call it, is [illegible] with ragtime every time from Brooklyn to Naples in the [illegible] have stated their [illegible] that Bobby made the move to the right [illegible].

UNEQUALLED FOR

SPEED & ENDURANCE

All the world's important speed and endurance contests since motoring began have been won on Michelin Tires. This absolute proof of their superiority must convince even the most skeptical that they are best. Michelins wear longer and ride more resilient than any other tires, and are more durable, economical, easier riding and faster.

CUBS LOSE EVERS FOR THREE DAYS

PITTSBURG, Sept. 7.—Johnny Evers of the Chicago Cubs, was suspended for three days today by President Heydler of the National League, and was not in the Cubs line-up when they tackled the Pirates in the great pennant fight this afternoon.

"Inexcusably bad language" was the charge upon which Heydler suspended the Trojan, as wrekening the Cubs at the most critical moment of the pennant fight. Manager Chance told Zimmerman to prepare to play second base.

"We are in the fight just the same," said Chance. "It's a big handicap at this stage of the game, but the cubs are always stronger and fight harder when they have a handicap to overcome. Clarke used no abusive language to Klem than Evers did and I can prove it. Yet Clarke was not even out of the game, while Evers drew three cars' suspension. "Well, he may run me out of the running," was will win the pennant just the same."

AMERICAN LEAGUE GROUNDS, Washington, Sept. 7.—The Red Sox opened up against the Senators in the first battle of a three-game series this afternoon. The Washington fans do not now believe the Speed Boys have a chance for the pennant, basing their opinion on the instability of the team. No club that played the ball the Bostons did yesterday against the New Yorks can hurt the flag in the feeling.

Lake's men, however, hope to make a clean-up of the series here, trusting that the Athletics and Detroits lose a few at this same time. Then, with the Western clubs in the East, they will fight it out on even grounds. The Senators looked easy, and if they play as poorly against the Red Sox as they have for the past month the visitors will make a clean sweep.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Sept. 7.—The last game of the series between the Doves and the Giants was staged this afternoon. To-night the Boston Club returns home to finish out the week, and then they will leave for the West.

There was only a small crowd present today. New York fans have given up hope of seeing the pennant go from the Polo Grounds' flagpole, and only the regulars came out to see the conflict this afternoon. Manager Smith said his men would play right along to the finish with the idea of getting out of the last place. He will get a chance of trying out some more new material in a few days.

With Mathewson out of the way the Doves thought they had an even chance against the Giants, and they went after to-day's game with lots of pepper.

GOLF GOSSIP
NEWS OF THE LINKS

Frank Hoyt of Alliston is not only able to play some high class golf on his home course, but showed some pretty golf in the Ekwanok tournament. He is a former champion of Maine and at one time held the championship of the Alliston course. His record at home was broken by A. G. Lockwood, who played a remarkable game four. He played the round in a team match with Brockton, and not only were his putts all holed but his approach shots found some of the cups.

There will be two tournaments running Friday and Saturday of next week, one at the Commonwealth Country club and the other at the Bellevue Club in Medway. This is the tenth annual meeting of the Bellevue Club and will undoubtedly be a successful meeting. The absence of Travers and other noted players in the national tournament may affect the entry a little, but by Friday of next week the championships will be down to golf men and some of the unlucky ones will have returned by that time.

The golfing world will be all awhirl with tournaments on Labor Day, to say nothing of the championship tournament at Wheaton, and the Women's championship at Homewood, there will be great activity at all the clubs both West and East. In the vicinity of Boston there will be home tournaments at Allston Commonwealth, Brae Burn, Chestnut Hill, Winchester, Woodland, Albermarle, Lexington, Concord, Meadowbrook, Bellevue, Winchester and many others.

PERELLI VS. FULLY TO-MORROW NIGHT

With two such stars in the grappling game as John Perelli and Jack Fully, lovers of wrestling will find much to enthuse over at the Columbia to-morrow night. There needs no introduction for the Italian, despite his rough tactics, is always willing to show his prowess when he comes to the ring, and some of his best exhibitions have been against men far heavier than himself. Fully is a Pennsylvanian, formerly a miner, who has risen by hard work to the high pinnacle he now occupies in the world of wrestling. He is after Perelli's scalp and feels confident that he will have it dangling from his belt after the bout to-morrow night. He is said to be very fit as Perelli when in action and some lively doings are anticipated when the pair clash.

STRAIGHT DOPE
FOR SPORT FANS

Take a Chance.

If you want to make the base—
Take a chance;
S'pose you can fall, it's no disgrace—
Take a chance;
Don't depend on number two
Remember now it's up to you.
Speed and nerve will put you through—
Take a chance.

If you want to win a place—
Take a chance;
Mung a dark horse was a race—
Take a chance;
Plodding along the same old rut,
Tailes you to success—all but.
Win or lose, be game—like Mutt.—
Take a chance.

NOW COMES ALONG JAMES WITH the wallop and wants to get into the game. I think if you call on Billy Pierce at the Armory A. A. you can get a chance to show what you can do. He is always looking for good boys and will treat you right. And by the way, you'll need something more than a sailor to get very far, for there are a lot of mighty tough boys about your weight who box at the Tripple A.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

I would like to state a few facts through your columns, and that is that I would like to meet any 135-pound boy in the State. Now I have no conceit of myself, but I would like to meet some one. I have trained with Young Peter Jackson and I am in good condition. I have boxed in a club to which I belong and have no privileges with it. Now would you tell me how I could get a match? Thanking you, I remain,

JAMES HAGERTY.

Will you please tell me how many triple plays were made unassisted in the American League since its organization, and how many made in organized baseball. Enclosed find stamped envelope and oblige. Yours truly,

J. HOPKINS.

Central Village, Ct.

They have not been officially recorded—probably four or five in organized leagues.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Please settle a bet. Who is the oldest player in the league at the close of the season? Some of the fans around here claim there are open dates which they would like to fill. Now as the Boston Nationals and Red Danses of Redmen both claim the championship, I would like to ask why their teams should cannot their games with the Madisons. The Boys' Wellesleys have cancelled both of their games with the Madisons for some unexplained reason. I cannot see where the Boys' Wellesleys claim to the title, as they have been defeated by the Madisons and Newtonville. Now I am willing to put my team against both the Boys' Wellesleys and Notre Dames, either at home or away, and will play a return game. If they think they have anything on the Madisons, now is the time to show it. Hoping to see this in your column, I remain,

Yours truly,

BIG MONEY EARNED BY MAJOR CLUBS

There are clubs in the National and American leagues this year that will make over $150,000 on an investment not much greater than that sum, says Stallings of the Yankees.

"The game has outgrown all the prophecies—yes, all the ambitions—of the men who have fostered it.

"It wasn't long ago that 3,000 people at a weekday game was considered a big turnout. When we were well up in the race in midseason we were drawing 12,000 to 15,000 people a day in New York, and often on Saturdays had to turn away 20,000 or 10,000 people that we were unable to accommodate.

"The Athletics, Red Sox, Pirates, Cubs, Tigers and Giants may make from $100,000 to $250,000 each this season.

"The sometimes marvel at the enterprise of the magnates in laying out ball parks and building palatial new stands, but it will all come back.

SOUTHERN LEAGUE RESULTS

Montgomery 3, Little Rock 2 (first game); Montgomery 2, Little Rock 1 (second game).

Nashville 5, Memphis 4 (12 innings, a. m.); Memphis 5, Nashville 4 (11 innings, p. m.).

New Orleans 5, Birmingham 4 (a. m.); New Orleans 1, Birmingham 0 (p. m.).

Atlanta 5, Mobile 1 (first game); Mobile 2, Atlanta 0 (second game, 7 innings, called).

HIGH BALLS NOT POPULAR TO PITCH

Addie Joss, baseball pitcher par excellence in the Summer time and sporting editor in the off season, is of the opinion that the most successful high ball pitching is a thing of the past.

"There was a time," says Joss, "when it was the accepted theory that one of the requisites of the first-class pitcher was ability to keep the ball around the batter's neck.

"That is true when the man at bat is trying to pull off the hit and run play. Formerly, when the twirlers kept their high ball high, it was safe for the batter either step back or in, as the occasion required, and push or pull in the direction he wanted it to go. With the low ball it is different, as the batter cannot jump the ball any too well, and finds it a difficult matter to place it.

"It is particularly hard for the batter to follow a low ball on a dark day, as was shown in the second game of the world's series between New York and the Athletics on the Polo Grounds. 'Chief' Bender, who was on the mound for Connie Mack's men, is a pitcher who, when right, has a tremendous amount of speed. The Athletics managed to score a few runs for Bender early in the game, and with the lead there was no chance for the Giants to catch up.

"Bender had the advantage of the gathering gloom, and this, coupled with his ability to keep the ball low, proved a stumbling block for the aggressive Giants

DISTANCE RACERS ARE RESTING FOR TERRIFIC 318 MILE AUTO RACE

By J. C. KERRISON.

LOWELL, Sept. 7.—All of the automobile drivers who hold marvelous records for first long-distance driving are resting in Lowell to-day, preparing for the nerve-racking, mind-reading race of 318 miles which takes place in the Merrimac Valley course to-morrow.

The mechanical are busy. Every machine which is to take part in the great race of the meeting is being overhauled and thoroughly inspected. Everything about them must be scanned and nothing which might cause a breakdown overlooked.

The men who are to guide the big cars of the 231 miles in the afternoon are calm and the race against time are spending the day as quietly as possible. They must be thoroughly rested, mind and body, for the grind of the race every minute of hour after hour at high speed is more wearing than can be imagined.

Brilliant Race Finish.

Burman, Chevrolet and Knipper, the former two driving Buicks, and the latter at the wheel of a Chalmers-Detroit, finished in the lead in their respective classes in the first of the motor races of the Lowell Automobile Club.

Their work was of the meteor order, being brilliant and finishing in the crowd, all traveling faster than fifty miles an hour throughout the long grueling race, the course record of fifty-three miles an hour established by his team-mate Strang in the contest last year.

The glory of Knipper was somewhat clouded by the filing of a protest on the ground that he did not carry his hood throughout the race, but this protest was not sustained.

The contest board refused to sustain this protest against Knipper after carefully considering all of the circumstances. The board decided that while Knipper's car had lost its hood, the driver had recovered as soon as possible, and accordingly the protest was not allowed.

Spectacular Contest.

When viewed from a spectacular standpoint, the contests, three in number, were the most successful and brilliant this country has ever seen. At times there were twenty-two cars on the track. The crashes and duststorms were particularly interesting and frequent, so that for over three hours the 125,000 people who lined the 161 miles of the course were kept in a perfect turmoil of excitement.

The daring, fearless drivers, with faces blackened by the oil from the roads, with lines of determination written on their faces, every nerve strained to the utmost, and dealing but one thing, the lead and victory, dashed madly around corners, taking the turns and blind curves without a trace of fear.

Time and time again the men went around the "hairpin" and down the "dip of death" at seventy-five miles an hour, and not a single mishap occurred at either of those places. The right angle turns at Varnum and Dunbar avenues, and from the latter into the boulevard, proved the most disasterous on the entire route, at least five persons being injured at those points. None were seriously injured, however. The cars made those turns on two wheels, time and time again, and yet but two cars met with misfortune at either place.

JIM GREENE WINS THREE-MILE SWIM

The annual long-distance swim from the Ocean Pier Boat Club to the Point of Pines was won by Jim Greene, a member of the club. Sam Richards, a chum of Greene's, was a close second and John Bray of the Columbia Life Savers of Revere was a poor third. Silver loving cups were given the first three who finished.

Ten swimmers started the race, the estimated distance of which is approximately three miles. Five of the ten starters finished.

WOLGAST IS FAVORITE OVER MAT BALDWIN

It's up to Matty Baldwin, the dapper little Charlestown featherweight, to stop the upward career of one Ad Wolgast, the hard-hitting fighter from Milwaukee, who will be seen in the ring for the first time to-night by the local fans when this pair mixes up at the Armory A. A.

The skie of the job Baldwin has cut out for him is the biggest he has yet tackled. Wolgast retains the prestige of having given Ad Nelson a warm argument for ten rounds and had none the worst of it.

He is a legitimate lightweight, as he always weighs under the limit, and will step on the mat to meet Baldwin scaling 128 pounds.

The opening bout is one of eight rounds between Tom Foley of South Boston and Johnny Cahill of the South End.

Harry Wood of Providence, better known as Dummy Trocher, will meet Kid Perron in the other bout, as Mike Glover claims he cannot get into condition.

Baseball News and Notes

Jim McGinley insists there isn't much to be definitely decided until the closing two weeks.

Ten of the fastest runners ever in baseball, two dozen like real sprinters, have been Brownson and George.

Pittsburgh has pitched some good games this year for the Dodgers, although his last few performances were not notable ones.

Superiority of the Cubs in being able to secure, at the right moment aided them in taking the cut of Ben Dong, the Giants.

Arthur Fromme, bean pole artist, with the Reds, is that team's most consistent winner.

S. Seymour is covering plenty of territory for the Giants and hitting the ball hard. If Artie Fletcher only hits in now and secures Seymour's batting it will help the Giants' cause.

That long-awaited drama has not hit Charles Ad Bruce crew yet, and unless it does, the fans will be unable to form any consistent conclusion as to which team in the Fall instead of the various world's post-season games.

Dutch Myers, Brooklyn's newest man, has made his initial bingo in the big show. Considerable fly awaits with eagerness every word from Brooklyn Negro as the club from there staked Dutch to that Harry stands the pace to the National.

Phillips, who caught and played right field for the Yales last Spring, proved with the Reds that if he intends to become a professional ball player he will do so before June, 1910, as he is Yale's captain for next year.

The Toronto team will have to be scrutinized very closely when it comes to figuring out the result of the Eastern League race.

The Papers got a star twirler by draft in Brownell from San Francisco. The Coast club recently turned down the offer for him. Right other name clubs were after Brownell.

Eastern League dope says that it is dangerous to approach John Garrett, manager of the Rochester team, when it has lost, particularly by a close margin.

Sam Crawford has superseded Ty Cobb in the "clean up" position in the Tigers' batting order.

An odd coincidence in baseball this year is the fact that three of the best young players happen to be named Bauman. They are Cullen of the Athletics, Egan of Cincinnati and Miller of Pittsburg.

Why is it that a batter takes an unholy delight in assisting a slow ball for a base hit? Probably for the same reason that a pitcher delights in fooling the batter with a slow ball.

Honest criticism is all right, but there is no doubt about Lajoie having suffered "knocks" which he did not deserve. Now that Nap has resigned as manager of the Cleveland team his critics should be entirely satisfied.

Jimmy Macray's head back is still following him. Last year he was out to Buffalo for a long time because of being hit in the head by a pitched ball, and now he is out of the game in St. Paul from the same cause. Rather in the season he had a leg broken and was out of the game for a month.

BOSTON AMERICANS DOUBLE

Keep Young by Being Abreast of the Times

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

WHATEVER your station, age or occupation, keep yourself in touch with the times and in sympathy with all the progressive movements of the day.

Keep alive, awake and expectant.

Never for a moment allow yourself to think you have outlived everything of interest in life.

Never for a moment believe you have passed your prime.

There are women who were old at sixteen; there are others who are eighty and still in their prime.

It is wholly a matter of thought and feeling.

The most fascinating woman I ever knew was eighty-six, and she attracted men and women of all ages by her beauty, her wit, her magnetism and charm.

Her eyes were brilliant, her complexion dazzling, and everywhere she moved she drew admiring glances; and, when she talked, people flocked about her. She had kept and cultivated a sense of humor; she saw the amusing side of life, and she appreciated the new discoveries in science and invention, and no one ever heard her say how much better the world was in her day than in the present time, because her day was always to-day.

Love and Appreciation

Her husband was her lover to the day he died, and both lived close to the four-score-and-ten-year mark.

No man ever falls out of love with a woman of that type.

Whatever your age may be, begin now to think of yourself as in the dawn of new development. Say to yourself many times a day that you possess more vital power, more mental force, more magnetism, and charm than ever before in your life.

Say also that you are better loved and more fully appreciated for all your virtues and charms than ever before, and that your ability to give and receive happiness is unlimited.

Taen use moments which you have been accustomed to idle away or to employ in melancholy thoughts, in improving yourself. Let this improvement be three-fold, until body and mind and spirit all radiate new brilliancy.

Instead of bemoaning the fact that your hair is growing thin and losing its lustre, give a few moments daily to systematic care and nourishment of woman's great glory; feed the hungry pores, and brush and air and sun your locks. And always maintain a new yourself beautiful and radiant.

Give your complexion care; cleanse and nourish the cells which lie under the cuticle. Rouse the half-dead surface to action and breathe new power into your lungs which will send warm blood all over your stagnant system.

Give your mind new thoughts. Give your spirit new aspirations and feed your brain with some new purpose.

Keep up whatever accomplishments you possess; cultivate new ones. Begin at forty, fifty or sixty, even, to study languages and music and art.

To Stay Youthful

And instead of continually thinking about advancing age, think about increasing qualities and charms; instead of worrying over added years, rejoice over added occupations and means of enjoyment. Encourage the young to seek your society. Amuse and interest them, and this can only be done by keeping in sympathy with their ideas.

If you find your thoughts running along the lines of criticism and disparaging comparisons of the young people of the day, with those of your own morning time, keep your ideas to yourself. Do not utter them.

In the first place, they are not true, and in the next place they will do no one any good.

By searching your memory carefully you will find just as much to criticise in your best and your early associates as you find in the young people of to-day.

It is only that you have outlived so many youthful emotions that you are so easily shocked at what young people do nowadays. Overcome the tendency to be carping and severe and cater into all the feelings of the young.

It will make life far more interesting to you and make you more interesting to others.

That is the only way to combat time and to turn him from an enemy to a friend.

Make yourself more beautiful, more popular, more accomplished and more attractive with the years.

Let death find you occupied in self-improvement when he comes for you, and he will realize the necessity of giving you appropriate and suitable accommodations on the Other Side.

As she spoke she had a vision of herself as she put away her dead child's playthings

THE president of the Women's Club was vainly trying to find a chairwoman for her most important committee, but with one voice the women to whom the post was offered made excuse.

"I am so sorry, Madame President, that I can't take it, but really I just can't, with my house full of babies that simply keep me a prisoner in my nursery," said one.

"I'd just like to head that committee, Madame President, but my boys are coming home from school this week, and you know what that means. The house will be in a continual clutter, and I'll spend every minute picking up and putting away and cleaning up after them," grumbled another.

"I feel that it is an honor to even be asked to serve in such a position," said a third, "but I am rushed to death with making my children's clothes. We mothers are nothing but slaves. We never have a minute of our own."

"Quite impossible for me," declared a fourth. "I only ran away from home to-day because it seemed to me that I should go crazy if I didn't get away for a while from the sticky little fingers clutching at my skirt and the eternal cry for 'mother' that's in my ears from the time I get up in the morning until I go to bed at night, and even afterward, for it seems to me that I'm hopping up all night, getting drinks of water for Tommy and Mary and tucking the covers in again around Billy and Freddy."

She Wasn't So "Fortunate"

So the murmurs of protest ran around the room, until at last the president's anxious face broke into a look of relief as she caught sight of a quiet little woman sitting in a far corner.

"Oh, Mrs. Blank," she cried, "you are the very one to take the chairmanship of the committee! You are so capable, and you have no children to worry you."

The ghost of a sad smile flitted across the face of the quiet little woman as she replied:

"Very well, Madame President, I will accept the chairmanship, for I have, as you say, no children to worry me."

"That's fortunate," said the president absently.

"Fortunate?" repeated the quiet little woman, bitterly; "oh, yes, it gives one so much time, for one has hands to work, and such opportunity to work for others, when one has no child of one's own for whose to do things.

"I'm not like these other ladies, rushed with a thousand little cares and duties that are so important they cannot be left to any one else. I am not tied to a nursery, and I go out a great deal because the house is so still—and so lonely—that I flee from it as I would from the silence of the grave.

"I don't have to hurry home, for there are no anxious little hearts waiting for Mother's return, and no wistful little faces pressed against the window pane looking for me as I come up the street, and no scurrying of little feet to greet me at the door. Oh, no, I don't have to hurry home.

Why She Wasn't Busy

"I'm not busy. There are no little garments for me to make; no little stockings to darn, no patching to set, no buttons to sew on. I don't have to clean little jackets, and sew up the rents in torn frocks, and drop my embroidery to put a few stitches in the knee of a stocking that has been snagged at hopscotch, or worn through on a pavement playing marbles.

"And my house is very clean and very orderly. There's never a book misplaced, or a sofa cushion rumpled, or a scratch on the furniture, or a smear of sticky fingers on a piece of silver. Nobody ever plays Indian with my mahogany chairs or uses the pillows in a pillow fight. You never find a pair of roller skates on the mantelpiece, or frogs in the bathtub, or any of the mess that there is in a house where there are children.

"But it was not always this way with me. Once—so long ago that everybody has my night's rest broken, until at last I put forgotten it but their father and me—I had two children, and then I was like you other women. My days were full, my hands were busy, and I spent my time answering to the call of 'Mother,' and I complained, too, because my house was cluttered with little caps and jackets and toys, that I was forever picking up and putting away.

"Then there came a night when there was a ceaseless cry for water from feverish little lips, and I have remembered through thirty years—my God, through thirty years —that I was cross with them about having my hand upon the little beads and found that they were burning hot with fever. In three days it was all over, and—and—then father and I had left all that had made life worth living to us buried in two little graves in the cemetery.

"When we came home, as I groped my way with blinded eyes, I stumbled in the hall over a little iron toy train and a broken doll, that had been left just where I had always forbidden them. I had always punished the little culprits for cluttering up the hall, but I knelt down and took the poor little toys to my breast, and for days and weeks and months I never let them out of my hands.

A Memory Is All She Has

"Finally when it seemed to me that I must go mad with my grief, I thought that if I did not have any reminder of my children about me I might be better able to forget, and so I gave away all their clothes and toys, all but the old doll and the battered train, and I took them and went up into the garret and broke a piece of the plastering off and dropped them down in between the walls, and then I had plasterers and paperhangers come and obliterate the very spot.

"People often wonder why my husband and I still live in the old-fashioned house way down town, that is all built about now by stores, and they express surprise that we do not follow the trend of fashion in town, for we've been offered many times the value of the old place. We do not tell, and they cannot know that it is because in the walls of the old house are a broken doll and a battered toy train that were put there wet with a mother's tears thirty years ago.

"Oh, yes, I will take the chairmanship of the committee. I have, as you say, no children to worry me."

STORYLAND

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

THERE'S a little, quiet path gently turning down
From the broad and traveled road that leads to Sleepytown;
Through a wondrous world it winds, for a while, and then
Wanders back to meet the Road at Slumber Hill again.
Do not fail to pass that way, watching, close at hand
Along the valley down below the folk of Storyland.

There the magic Beanstalk grows, almost to the skies;
There the Giant looks for Jack with ferocious eyes;
There the Robins build with leaves, warm and snug and deep,
A shelter from the cold north wind, so the Babes may sleep;
There the terrible Three Bears welcome to their lair
And grow to be the best of friends with little Goldenhair.

All the folk of all the years since stories have been told
Pass before you as the skies are turned from blue to gold.
Alice and the Hatter chat with the mad March Hare,
Peter Pan and Tinker Bell loiter idly there.
While, if you but look about, you'll find in many nooks
A host of Fairy Kings and Queens who never lived in books.

Pause a while in Storyland; see it while you may—
For the pathway has a gate that will close some day.
And although you still will pass on toward Sleepytown
You may never turn aside on the journey down—
Turn aside and tarry there watching, close at hand,
Along the valley down below the folk of Storyland.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

GIRL MAY BE SHY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A young man attends an evening company and has the pleasure of meeting a young lady whom he becomes attached to and likes very much. He accompanies this young lady home, but no invitation to call is extended, although the young man feels she would like very much to have him call. Now, would it be the young man's place to ask permission, in an instance of this kind, to call? If so, how should he approach her on the subject? PERPLEXED.

It is possible that the girl is shy, and I think you could tell her that you would like very much to call, and that would give her the chance to invite you. It is usually the girl's place to ask the man to call, but I think your case is unusual.

KEEP AWAY FROM HIM

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty years of age and in love with a young man two years my senior for the past three years. We were great friends for about six months, but after that length of time we were continually quarreling for no reason at all. It is now about eight months since we have spoken to each other. I am friends with his sisters and very often visit them. I love him very much, but believe that he dislikes me very much. What am I to do I feel miserable about this state of affairs. HEARTBROKEN

I THINK that it would be better if you did not go to see his sisters. You see, you are constantly hearing about him and running the chance of meeting him, and, dear, he may think that you are running after him, and, of course, you would hate that. Just try and put him out of your mind altogether. If you do not see him or hear of him that will grow easier after a time. It is much better to part than to be constantly quarreling.

BABIES BENEFIT BY NEW SKIN DISCOVERY

Stops Itching Immediately, Soothes and Comforts the Little Ones.

A demonstration of the efficacy and entire harmlessness of poslam, the new skin discovery, is afforded when it is applied to the tender skin of infants who are tortured with rashes, chafings, scaly and crusted humors and other skin aggravations. Its effect is soothing, the itching stops at once, the skin heals and is quickly restored to normal condition.

In the various forms of skin troubles in both infants and adults, poslam produces beneficial results from the first application. Eczema, acne, herpes, rash, tetter, etc., yield readily to its remarkable curative properties. Occasional applications will quickly banish pimples, blotches and complexion blemishes and will relieve and cure itching feet, scaly scalp, humors, etc.

Poslam can be had for fifty cents at any reliable druggist's, particularly at Riker-Jaynes drug stores and Houghton & Dutton's drug department, who make a specialty of it. Or the Emergency Laboratories, No. 32 West Twenty-fifth street, New York City, will send a trial supply free by mail to any one who will write for it. This is sufficient to show results in 24 hours.

How High Is the North Pole?

"I AM anxious to have a talk with this Doctor Cook and see if he found things up at the Pole just as I left them in '75," said Tommy's seafaring uncle.

"It was in the Spring of '75 that I and my whalers landed on top of the earth. We found the big pole guarded by a ferocious monster armed with a tremendous bone sword. I at once gave battle to the critter, and after a fierce duel dispatched him with my trusty rattlers. It was too cold to hang around long, so after climbing the pole and fixing Old Glory at the very top, we sang the Star Spangled Banner and sailed homeward."

"How high was the pole?" queried Tommy.

"Well, I can't just remember," replied Uncle Jake, "but I knew it measured sixty feet around, and that the rope which I fastened to the top and tied at the bottom, after winding it four times around the pole on my way down, was just 300 feet long."

Can you prove the truth of Uncle Jake's story by figuring out just how tall the North Pole must be?

What Kind of Man Makes the Best Husband?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WHAT would you do if you had two young men, both equally eligible from a social and money standpoint, paying desperate attention to you? They are equally eligible, as far as those two qualities go, but otherwise they are as far apart as the poles.

The girl in the question is not really in love with either, but she could be with one of them if she let herself go.

One of them she admires immensely. She respects him and finds him interesting to talk to. He is intelligent, very popular with all men and bound to make a success of his life as time goes on.

As far as women go, he lacks magnetism. All girls like him, but few fall in love with him. This particular girl on whom he has set his heart appreciates his brain, but she does not care for the touch of his hand. Physically she is not in the slightest degree drawn to him.

With the other man it is just the opposite. He is not at all clever; does not attempt to do anything but spend the money he inherited, and is inclined to be wild. But he has magnetism to a remarkable degree.

A Brief Happiness.

The girl knows that if she married him she would be madly happy for a short time and miserable the rest of her life.

He is the sort of man who cannot help making love to every woman he meets, and he would not be true to her for a year. Just at present, because she is unattainable, he is in mad pursuit of her. He is the sort of man to whom the prize once attained loses its value.

Now, which of those two men would you advise her to take?

Of course, there is always the chance of some man coming along who combines brain, goodness and magnetism, but let us eliminate the unknown third and consider the two on hand.

Some people would at once decide that it would be far wiser to take the first man, and so, of course, it would be on wisdom's side, but is it better to have perfect happiness for a short time than lukewarm happiness for a long time—that's the question.

Sentimentalists would exclaim, "Marry the man you love and know perfect happiness, if only for a short time."

The girl has few relatives and is earning her own living, and is tired of it and would like to marry. When she came to me for advice I advised her if she was determined to accept one of them to take the first, that the chance for the second man is not real love; it is merely attraction and will not last.

The Man Who Is Spoiled

The first man she respects and she enjoys an intellectual friendship with him. He is not a good-looky, namby-pamby man; he is a real man whom all men love and respect. He is not an angel, but he will make an angelic husband.

In time the girl will grow to care for him. It may not be a whirlwind, passionate love, but it will be an affection based on respect and congeniality, and that is the kind that lasts.

If she married the other man her life would be spent in looking after him and forgiving him. If she marries this man his life will be spent in looking after her and giving her the tender, protecting care that every woman loves.

The gay, debonair, magnetic men may be the kind that make a girl's heart go pit-a-pat, but the steady, reliable men are the ones who take care of her and make the best husbands. There is no one so easy to spoil as the good-looking man who has personal magnetism. Every woman succumbs to him and the result is a thoroughly conceited, spoiled man.

You don't want a man that other girls have spoiled. Branch out for yourself and choose the good, kind, manly man who is sure of his own irresistible charms. He is the man to make you happy.

Vincent Club Girl Becomes Bride To-day

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT

Autumn with its galaxy of fashionable weddings is here, and leading the pay procession of winsome brides is the prettiest of them all, Miss Hope Hemenway, who to-day becomes Mrs. John Richardson, Jr. The wedding, which was a distinctly brilliant affair on account of the large and fashionable connections on both sides, took place in the quaint little edifice, Christ Church, in Readville, this afternoon, and was followed by a reception at the country home of the Hemenways at Readville. Bishop Lawrence, who is an uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony.

Miss Hemenway, who was gowned in the conventional white satin, was given in marriage by her father, Augustus Hemenway, and was attended by her younger sister, Miss Charlotte Hemenway.

Miss Hemenway, who was one of last Winter's most charming buds, bears the distinction of being the first of her select coterie to don bridal attire. She is a Vincent Club girl and also a member of the New Riding Club. She is distinctly the Puritan type of maiden and her gowns and hats are always simply though elegantly built. She is of the demure rather than the dashing type of society girl and her friends are innumerable.

Mr. Richardson, who is a Harvard, Class of '03, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Richardson of Chestnut Hill and Cohasset, and one of the best known young clubmen in town.

After the reception the bride and groom started on an extended honeymoon tour, and upon their return in the late Autumn will take up their abode at the home now being built in readiness for them in Hubbard Park in Cambridge.

The Richardson-Hemenway nuptials were attended by the distinguished connections on both sides, which include the Lawrences, the Lorings, the Brookses, the Cunninghams and all the Hemenways.

One of the smart affairs of the season at Newport was the dinner dance given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish at Crossways for their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Zabriskie the Gray. There were ninety guests at dinner, which was given in the dining room, the enclosed veranda and large hall. Among the dinner guests were Mr. and Mrs. Anson Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Lathrop Ames, Miss Sallie Thayer, Miss Blanche Oelrichs, Miss Anna Sands, William Sands, and Charles Hayden.

The Labor Day hunt at Lenox was over nine miles of excellent country, the riders meeting the hounds at the forks of the Richmond road, across the Taghconic, where the scent was thrown in. Then followed three miles of steady run to the Tyler cob stable, and from there to the hill. Riding with six miles more to the kill, riding with Frederick Bull, Master of the Hounds, were Miss Helene Meyer, Miss Charlotte Barnes, Miss Vera Bloodgood, Chester G. Burden, George Lawrence Rockwell, Morris, Herbert Shaw, Malcolm Stoane, and Flick Harold.

"The Greatest Detective in the World"

"Story of the Thrilling French Drama, "Arsene Lupine," Now Being Presented in This Country By Charles Frohman.

Synopsis.

Arsene Lupin, the most daring of thieves, robs the chateau of the Duke of Charmerace and later is on a six-year exploring expedition. The chateau is occupied by M. Gournay-Martin, an art collector.

Lupin always sends a letter of warning to his victims in advance, telling what he will take and when he will commit the robbery. In the place of the stolen objects he chalks his name. Yet for ten years he defies the police.

When the Duke first appears in the story Sonia Kritchoff, a beautiful Russian girl, is addressing notices of an approaching marriage to Germaine, the daughter of Gournay-Martin. Germaine betrays petty jealousy toward Sonia, whom he, the Duke, considers.

A fat little man, calling himself M. Chaudois, enters with a youth—his son, he says. They consider purchasing an auto from Gournay-Martin. Chaudois goes in the garage, returning with three other youths, also his sons. Chaudois takes the keys to the Gournay-Martin Panhard from a desk.

Another letter of warning from Arsene Lupin arrives, saying he will steal from the Paris banks the funs which Gournay-Martin had from him on his first visit, three years before. The Paris furniture fathers-in-law prepares to catch a train for Paris, and finds all his cars but one stolen. Then the Duke leaves in the remaining auto.

He reaches the Paris house the next morning to find it looted. He calls the police.

Chapter V.—Continued.

THEY went to the room of Victoire, the caretaker, in the attic. Her bed had been occupied, but there was no trace of her there. They went to the basement, to the apartments of the janitor and his wife. Both were lying in bed, bound and gagged, and almost suffocated.

They were barely able to speak when the gags and ropes were removed, although the Duke questioned them exactly. The Commissary interposed.

"Let them have time to recover," he said. "Pull yourselves together, my good people," he said to them. "The examining magistrate will be here shortly and he will wish to question you."

The terrified pair mutely signified their acquiescence, and Charmerace, with the Commissary, returned to the drawing room. In the middle of the floor lay a handsomely bound book from the library of Monsieur Gournay-Martin. The Duke was about to take it up, when the Commissary stopped him.

"We must touch nothing, Your Grace, until the examining magistrate has been here," he said.

With a shrug the Duke submitted.

A Stupid Magistrate.

"And this examining magistrate?" he questioned. "Is he an intelligent person?"

"Theoretically, yes," the Commissary replied, with a laugh. "But in reality he is very stupid."

"I think I will notify the chief inspector of the Secret Police, M. Guercard," the Duke suggested, going over to the telephone.

"By all means," the Commissary agreed, giving the Duke his telephone number.

After one or two ineffectual attempts on a busy wire the redoubtable Guerchard was reached. The Duke began to tell of the robbery, but checked himself at some word from the other end.

"Oh, you know all about it; you are on your way here. Very good. Good-bye."

"He's coming," Charmerace said, as he hung up the receiver. "Now, I suppose, the only thing we can do is to wait for the arrival of the examining magistrate."

They had not long to wait. The detective who had accompanied the Commissary announced in a few minutes the arrival of that dignitary, who shortly threw open the door and entered the room. He was a man of imposing personage, dressed all in black, with black gloves, black mustache, black side whiskers, black hair parted in the middle, and a white band. He looked as if he might be in search of something, for the eyes of those whose crimes he could neither fathom nor

CHAPTER XII.

The Impossible Body

"IT will be a great misfortune if you don't tell the truth," muttered Rouletabille, in smothered tones. "But if you conceal nothing, the trouble may not be so great. Come this way."

And he drew him, clasping him by the fist, toward the New Chateau, I following. I saw that a great change had come over Rouletabille. He was completely his old self again. Now that he was so happily relieved of the horror of separation from his mother, which had pressed on his mind ever since his early childhood, now that he had again found the perfume of the Lady in Black, he seemed to have recaptured all the forces of his spirit and was ready to enter eagerly into the strife against the mysteries which surrounded us. And, until the day when all was ended—until the last supreme moment—the most dramatic that I have ever lived through in the whole course of my existence—the moment in which life and death spoke out and were explained by his lips—he never again made a sign of hesitation in the forward march of events.

Bernier walked in front of us, his head bent, looking like an accused man who is being led on his way to trial. And when we reached Rouletabille's room, the young reporter bade Bernier sit down facing us. I lighted the lamp. Rouletabille sat silent for a moment, looking at Bernier, lighting his pipe the while. Then he blew a cloud of smoke from the corner of his mouth, and, after he had blown a few rings of smoke toward the ceiling, he said:

"Well, Bernier, now did you kill him?"

Bernier shook his shaggy head.

"I have sworn to say nothing, and I will say nothing, monsieur. And, upon my word of honor, I know nothing."

"All right," went on Rouletabille, uncompromisingly, "if you don't know, you don't know. For if you do not tell me what you know, Bernier, I will be responsible for nothing, no matter what happens."

"And for what could you be responsible in any case, monsieur?"

"For what I may do, I won't answer for your safety, Bernier."

"For my safety? I have done nothing."

"For the safety of all of us, then—for our lives, even!" replied Rouletabille, arising from his chair and rising restlessly across the room, in order, doubtless, to give himself an opportunity to gain more self-possession. "Bernier, mental aberration is necessary—mental aberration. Bernier, do you believe in God?"

"In the Supreme Tocsin?"

Bernier did not speak, but he nodded assent.

"Where? In Old Bob's bedroom?"

"No," Bernier shook his head.

"Hidden in your cupboard?"

Bernier shook his head vehemently.

"Well, where was he then? He could certainly not have been in the apartments of M. and Mme. Darrac!"

Bernier bowed his head.

"Bernier, Bernier!" cried Rouletabille, and he leaped at Bernier's throat. I rushed to the rescue of the concierge and snatched him from the young man's clutches. As soon as he could breathe, the old servant looked up pitifully.

"Why, did you try to strangle me, M. Rouletabille?" he asked.

"How dare you ask, Bernier? How dare you? And now acknowledge that he was in the apartment of M. and Mme. Darrac! Who, then, gained his entrance to that apartment? No one but yourself. You, the only person who had the key when the Darracs were not there!"

Bernier arose to his feet. He was as pale as a ghost, but his look and attitude were full of dignity.

"M. Rouletabille, do you accuse me of being an accomplice of Larsan?"

"I forbid you to pronounce that name!" shouted the reporter. "You know very well that Larsan is dead—and has been dead for months!"

"For months!" echoed Bernier, ironically. "Yes, that is true—I was wrong to forget it. When one devotes oneself to his masters and permits himself to be beaten and insulted for them, it is necessary to ignore everything, no matter what they may do to you. I beg your pardon, sir."

"Listen to me, Bernier. I know that you are a brave man and I respect you. It is not your good faith that I am questioning, but I am censuring your negligence."

"My negligence!" Bernier, as pale as his face had been, echoed grimly. "My negligence! I have not budged from my lodge—not even from the corridor. I have always worn the key in my breast pocket and I swear to you that no one entered that room—no one at all—after you were there at 5 o'clock, except M. and Mme. Darrac, themselves. I do not count, of course, the few moments that you and M. Saincaire were there at about 6 o'clock."

"What!" exclaimed Rouletabille. "Do you want me to believe that this individual you have forgotten his name, I think, Bernier—let us call him 'the Man'—that the man was killed in M. Darrac's rooms if he was not there?"

"I do not. And, furthermore, I can swear to you that he was there."

"Yes, but how could he have been? That is what I ask you, Bernier. And you are the only one who can answer because you alone had the key in the absence of M. and Mme. Darrac. And M. Darrac never took the key with him when he left the room and no one could have gotten into the room to hide while he was there."

"That is the mystery, monsieur. That is what puzzles M. Darrac more than all the rest. But I have only been able to answer him as I have answered you. There is the mystery."

"When you left the room with M. Darrac, M. Saincaire and myself of about a quarter after six, did you lock the door immediately?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"When did you open it after that?"

"Not at all."

"In front of the door of my lodge, I was watching the door of the apartment. My wife and I took our dinner in that same lodge. Then I went up to the floor above to see that the chateau of the Duke of Charmerace was in order for the arrival of the examining magistrate. They had not long to wait. The detective who had accompanied the Commissary announced in a few minutes the arrival of that dignitary, who shortly threw open the door and entered the room. He was a man of imposing personage, dressed all in black, with black gloves, black mustache, black side whiskers, black hair parted in the middle, and a white band. He looked as if he might be in search of something, for the eyes of those whose crimes he could neither fathom nor check.

Without a word or a bow to the right or left, he marched across the room, placed his hat on the table and extended his hand to the Commissary of Police. The latter presented the detective and the Duke.

In two magnificent strides the magistrate crossed the room, clasped his hand and bade it unnecessary sorrow.

"Your Grace, I am profoundly grieved at what has occurred in this house," he said.

"Well, it can't be helped," the Duke replied cheerfully. "It seems that Monsieur Arsene Lupin kept his word."

The Magistrate gave a sweeping majestic glance around the room, struck an attitude and cried:

"Ha! It is in this room that the thieves did their work."

Amusement began to gleam in the Duke's eyes, but he suppressed the rising impulse to laugh and waited, obviously there might be entertainment in the ancient judge. The open window, with the steel against the window sill, the ladder leaning against it from without and the shutters dangling aimlessly on its one hinge, caught his eyes. Will two more strides he was at the window, peering out into the small garden.

"It is here that the thieves effected entrance," he said, and through that window they entered with their booty."

"You saw all—as in the garden?" the Commissary suggested.

"Yes, plainly. There is an uninhabited house next door. The steps lead through the garden to that house. It is that way that the thieves came and went."

Briefly, the Commissary outlined to the Magistrate what he had learned; the discovery of the janitor and his wife, bound and gagged, the disappearance of Victoire, the caretaker.

"An accomplice," the Magistrate declared.

"I do not think so," Charmerace protested. "She has been with the family for a year and has their full confidence."

"Very well. I will speak to the janitor and his wife. Bring them in. We will inspect the other apartments."

"I'll go with you, if you don't mind," the Duke suggested.

"Why, Your Grace, by all means," the magistrate said. "This concerns you very nearly."

A Mysterious Man.

The engagement of Germaine and the Duke, both well known in Paris society, had long been publicly announced, and the magistrate wanted His Grace to know that he, too, was in the secret. They went out together, the Commissary following, leaving the drawing room empty.

A moment after they left there entered from a hallway leading to the domestic wing of the mansion a singularly mysterious looking personage. He was of medium height, compactly built, with iron gray hair and closely cropped gray mustache, beneath which were even white teeth gleamed in an almost perpetual smile. It was funny, rather than amusement, that the smile expressed.

His head was a white stock. He wore a loosely built gray overcoat and a soft black hat of the same color. His eyes were gray and keen. As he entered his hands were thrust into the side pockets of his overcoat, and he moved with long, noiseless strides. He cast a rapid approaching a point of vantage from which to spring upon and or mouse.

He Listens, Unseen.

With a quick look around and through all the doors to assure himself that no one approached, the newcomer began to work swiftly, quickly, taking in every corner, bending down to peer closely at the carpet, peering with his gray eyes at the overturned sofa. He went to the window and looked out into the garden. He glanced around the walls at the autograph of the thief and laughed with a soft, chuckling laugh. Then he heard the voice of the magistrate returning, and he stepped quickly to the window, climbed out on the ladder and let himself down until his soft hat was just above the sill. There he waited, listening and unseen.

"Only a discarded," the Magistrate was saying tolerantly as he returned. "Of course it is all right. I have notified him, Monsieur Guerchard is a capable man, but where the name of Arsene Lupin is mentioned he loses his head. He is a crank."

The figure on the ladder fitted itself a trifle, peeked in through the window, glanced sardonically and disappeared.

Charmarence had acquainted the Magistrate, and the Commissary with the events which transpired at the chateau on the afternoon of the theft of the pastels, the attempt of young Bernard to steal his cigarette case and the arrest of Chaudois, Gournay-Martin, Germaine, Sonia and Mlle. Weiss were all within call. They were requested by the Magistrate to remain until midnight for another train. They had sent a telegram which would be delivered to them, announcing the time of their arrival, shortly before midnight.

The Duke, Germaine at the chateau had any connection with this?" the Duke asked.

"Not the slightest," the Magistrate replied pompously. "Now, bring in the janitor and his wife. I will question them."

The old couple, still suffering from fright, but considerably the better for wine and breakfast, entered.

An Anarchist.

"Sit down!" the magistrate thundered at them.

The sofa was set upright and the two cringingly took places on its extreme edge. Their examination proceeded, and it was that the Magistrate was more stupid even than one had a right to expect from such an official. His clerk prodded the judge's record, which showed that he had been arrested three times.

"Sir, Your Worship, I only sold long live the Anarchists and down with the of—"

"Well, the whisky?"

"Down with the police," he answered, quaking with fear.

"That will do. You may go," the Magistrate said to the janitor's wife. "You are honest." The Duke said as the couple hurried back to their quarters, almost stumbling over a pair of in their haste.

Most Engaged Girl Is Still Heart Free

NEWPORT, Sept. 7.—As though she had fallen from the skies, Miss Edith Deacon, of Newport and France, has arrived here and received a welcome which must have done her heart good after an absence of one year. Miss Deacon has been reported engaged to more young men than any other woman of her age, and yet she is heart-whole.

Miss Deacon is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Pembroke Jones, who, with Henry Walters, gave a luncheon on board the steam yacht Narada as a welcome home.

Nightfall

By J. L. MILLIGAN

THE drabbest rearguard of the day
Still challenges the van of night.
The tide, full sated, cries nasty,
The last gull takes it seaward flight.

Spectral against the waning West
The boats at anchor rock to sleep,
Like ghosts lately at rest
Yet yonder in the hamless deep.

Along the river's grandeur-edge,
The plaints of far peacefully merge,
Like an illumined widow
And the horizon's dying verge.

From out the portal of the East
The pilgrim stars come one by one—
The great, the less, and Then the least,
Till all the dome of night is won.

I stand in thought amid the years,
Clothed with a dim mortality
And life like to this poet appears
An index of immensity.

At which the trading souls of men
Pelt in for short or long—the star,
Scourge their freight, loud up, and then
Slip from their mooring and—away?

Twilight

By ARTHUR SYMONS.

THE pale gray sea remains stealthily
Up the cole lilac of the beach;
A sheer gray, the waters reach
To where the horizon ends the sea.

Flushed with a tinge of dusky rose,
The clouds, a twilight lavender,
Flood the low sky, and dudder
The mad course flashing and flies,

Into the twilight of the land
And darkness, coming softly down,
Rustles across the fading sand
And folds its arms about the town.

FITCH BRAVE IN DYING HOURS

PARIS, Sept. 7.—Eugene Gauthier, who was the late Clyde Fitch's companion on his motor car journey, telegraphs that Mr. Fitch arrived at Chalons on August 28, after motoring through Austria and Germany, apparently in good health. He was taken during the night with an attack of appendicitis so acute that it was impossible to remove him to Paris. The fever continued very high throughout Monday and until Tuesday morning, but abated toward night. M. Gauthier's telegram continues:

"The two physicians who were in charge of the case decided that there ought to be an operation, but I insisted on having a third opinion. With that end in view I telephoned to a surgeon in Paris, who reached me at half past 11. There was no consultation and all agreed that an immediate operation offered the only chance, and that a slight one, to save the patient's life.

"Fitch showed admirable courage. His mind was clear every minute, even immediately after the operation on Wednesday. His condition was very bad on Thursday night, but there was an improvement on Friday, and that night the Paris surgeons were home. The situation seemed rather more hopeful on Saturday morning, but Fitch's strength gave way, and he entered upon the final agony at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. He died at half past 9, after terrible suffering."

NORTH ADAMS OLD HOME WEEK

NORTH ADAMS, Sept. 7.—This city is in gala attire to-day. Practically every building in the business section of the city is hidden neath the masses of bunting and flags. Thousands throng the city. It is North Adams' Old Home week celebration.

The opening event in the long round that mark the celebration was the firemen's muster, which was won by the F. M. Smith Veteran Firemen's Association of South Hadley Falls, with a throw of 241 feet, 4½ inches.

In the firemen's parade the Alerts of Adams, drawing the first they won at the World's Fair in Chicago for making the finest appearance of any company marching, again took first honors for appearance and the prize of $25. The Pittsfield Veteran Firemen's Association, with 180 uniformed men, took the $50 for most men in line. The South Hadley company won the prize of $10 for the best looking engine. The Gen. Nelson A. Miles company of Westminster took the prize for the most pony coming the greatest distance, and Capt. R. Young of that company, five feet tall and weighing eighty-two pounds, got the special prize of an umbrella for being the smallest man in line.

FALLS TWO STORIES.

While working to-day in the new building, No. 117 Warren street, Henry Cleary, sixty-one years old, of Battle street, Roxbury fell two stories to the cellar, fracturing both bones of the lower right leg and one bone of the left foot. He was taken to the City Hospital.

INCREASE IN THE VALUE OF MORTGAGES

Though the total number of mortgages filed during the past week in Suffolk County was slightly less than the total for the corresponding week of last year, the aggregate value was largely in excess of that of a year ago. The number of transfers the past week also fell off somewhat from that of last year, but exceeded the record of the same week of 1907.

The following table, compiled by the Real Estate Exchange, gives the record of entries for the week:

	1909.	1908.	1907.
No. of transfers	203	244	206
No. of mortgages	227	251	199
Amt. of mortgages	$1,222,253	$1,170,541	$515,570

The appended table, also compiled by the Real Estate Exchange, gives the record in detail of the business of the week, beginning August 30 and ending September 4:

	Sales.	Mortgages.	Amount of Mortgages.
August 30	43	54	$164,152
August 31	103	41	148,553
September 1	116	52	446,124
September 2	57	37	141,935
September 3	61	37	129,000
September 4	57	56	190,677
Total	437	225	$1,220,550

In the South End to-day the sale was reported of the 2½-story brick house and 1,200 square feet of land, assessed for a total of $3,100, at No. 15 Curve street, near Albany street, the property being conveyed by Thomas F. Lackey, Jr., to Bernard T. Donohoe. The land is rated for $1,000.

Cecelio G. Converse has sold to Silvian Lehman the frame dwelling house and 5,000 square feet of land at No. 120 Rossiter street, near Bullard street, Dorchester. The estate is taxed on a total valuation of $4,000, of which $1,500 is on the land.

In the same suburb Clifford M. Mosett has sold to Mary A. Mullen a frame three-apartment house and 4,500 square feet of land on Rossiter street, near Bowdoin street. The house, being new, is not yet assessed, and the land is rated for $60 per cent. a foot.

Alice F. Hooper has sold to Hiram P. Gerald a parcel of land containing 3,291 square feet of land on Bowdoin street, assessed for $1,300, at the corner of Bowdoin and Rossiter streets, Dorchester.

In West Roxbury Mary Hill has sold to Daniel H. Bradley a 2½-story frame stable and 10,200 square feet of land at No. 89 Berry street, near Comm. street. The property is assessed on a total valuation of $1,400, of which $200 is on the land.

The Chapin Farm Agency has sold for the estate of Mrs. Mary C. Brown and Mrs. Emily F. Cummings, of Portland, Me., their ancestral home situated on Pond Hill, in the northerly part of Roxbury, near Jamaica Plain, on the Jamaica road, bordering the Mission River, comprising eighty acres of land, a farm house of ten rooms, a large barn and numerous outbuildings with a wood lot and a fruit orchard. The farm was sold to Mrs. William S. Burbourn of Brookline, Me., who has already taken possession.

WHITE CITY NEAR CLOSE OF SEASON

To-day and to-morrow the last gatherings of the SUNDAY AMERICAN Outing Club will be held at White City on Lake Quinsigamond. With free tickets from last Sunday's BOSTON AMERICAN they will enjoy the closing days of the great Worcester County park. The free tickets are five in number, good afternoon or evening. Those for the theatre and afterships are free. The remaining three coupons give half fares on the scenic railway, at "Hy" Nichol's Jungle or at the mammoth chutes. The gate is free. Dancing may be enjoyed and the restaurant and other service is unexcelled.

WOMEN'S TOURNEY IS POSTPONED

NEWPORT, Sept. 7.—The invitation women's tournament tennis that was to be held at Newport to-day has been postponed until to-morrow. A few of the players who are entered in the game were out practicing this morning. Among them were Miss Eleanora Sears of Boston, Miss May Sutton of California, Miss Douglass Chapman of Philadelphia and Miss Lois Moyedes of Canada.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS

LOCAL STOCK LIST QUIET

STATE STREET, Sept. 7.—Local stocks opened quiet and heavy in tone in sympathy with the weakness of the New York market. Prices immediately receded, and a few specialties showed a disposition to harden. There were no unfavorable happenings over the three holidays, neither was there any unfavorable news.

Copper, the metal, was a trifle firmer in London at the opening, while there is no change to report in the domestic situation. Centennial, which was last week's feature, sold up 1¼ points at 44¼. Allouez touched 42½ and recovered 44½. Alloues fell 1 to 2.50 and Lake was quiet at 24½ to 24¾.

North Butte did little, being quoted at 66½@66¾. Atlantic stiffened a point to 12¾, and Mexico was quoted 11 to 11¼, including the $2 assessment recently called. Although there were no sales, Steel common touched 179¾ in this market.

The curb market broadened a trifle, but price changes were somewhat mixed. Davis-Daly and Cumberland were active and strong features. Black Bull Coal softened to 11¾. Silver Leaf Cobalt advanced to 17 cents.

WALL ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

WALL STREET, New York, Sept. 7.—It is libel on common knowledge to attempt to create alarm over the corn crop. They who are responsible for the agitation may be too long of the cereal, speculatively, and are, therefore, interested in spreading apprehension. The report of Secretary Wilson, to be published this week, very likely will show some decrease from the unprecedented figures of July, but not enough to warrant the slightest uneasiness or to modify the estimate of the largest corn harvest in the annals of American agriculture.

$ $ $

The body of speculators in Wall street is not content in its personality, its changes like the waters of a river every instant. The individuals that make up Wall street this year are of a cheerful type, and they believe prices have not by any means measured the coming prosperity. They are impressed with the remarkable abundance of money, many of whom without knowing the reason for it. The flood of money is due largely to the abnormal increase of the output of gold from the mines and also to the fact that business has not yet grown to the point of consuming all the floating capital. But it is due chiefly to the absolute confidence that exists in all parts of the world. There is not a dollar in hiding.

$ $ $

So great is the swelling tide of business, it can be said very conservatively that if Wall Street really measures the business improvement in figures, prices of stocks will advance in the next six months to such levels as will make the high figures of 1906 look like a panic. It is not necessary to give many details in support of this proposition. The Street Trust has orders on its books and in sight sufficient to give it net earnings of $200,000,000 in the year of 1910.

$ $ $

This condition of things never existed before, and Wall Street will have trouble in estimating its cash value on the ticker. It must be remembered that Wall Street also works. The man who stands by the silver buying and selling stocks is no purchaser of prosperity. He is rewarded or punished according to his skill, but he is just as necessary as the producer, because without him nobody would know what to buy for anything. Somebody must take a chance, and it has become fashionable to denounce the Wall Street speculator. The real estate appraiser and expert appraiser of fine art are in exactly the same class, but lack of prominence saves them from denunciation. The comical feature of denouncing Wall Street is that practically every person who indulges in the absurd abuse is really abusing himself, for there is scarcely an adult citizen of America who is not at one time or another a speculator.

WILD OPENING IN WALL STREET

By T. C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.—A relapse in the condition of E. H. Harriman's health, followed by rumors in London that he had died, caused a wild opening in the stock market in Wall street to-day.

Harriman shares broke wildly. Union Pacific's opening price being 5½ points under the previous closing. Southern Pacific showed a decline of 3¾ points and New York Central 3½. Other stocks declined in proportion.

Steel issues and Pennsylvania were conspicuous for their strength. Directors of the Sugar Trust will meet in the near future to suggest appropriations for the completion of the company's plant at Gary. This act will call for the expenditure of about $40,000,000. Sixty million dollars has already been spent on these plants.

During the first fifteen minutes of trading there was a slight rally in the general list, due to short coverings and purchases by large banking interests.

American stocks were weak in London in consequence of Harriman's illness and reports of his death.

REAL ESTATE AGENTS are kept very busy after Labor Day by the fact that many persons are moving and looking for new houses or apartments.

Are YOU one of these house-hunters?

If so, remember that you can save time, energy, car fare, and travel by using the TELEPHONE.

Call up as many agents as you desire and ask them "what they've got" in the locality in which you wish to settle.

And when you come to move, you'll find the TELEPHONE to be the handiest thing you can find for arranging all the details.

It doesn't make any difference where you are or where you're going. The Long Distance service connects the entire Bell System.

The Good That Mrs. Sage's Intelligent Philanthropy Will Do

It Will Encourage Men of Small Means to Leave the City—a Blessing to Children

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

Mrs. Sage's kind and benevolent heart and her excellent friends and advisers, devised, among other public-spirited works to be accomplished with her money, the building of model, low-price suburban residences for men and women of small means.

This is not a charitable, but a philanthropic undertaking. If Mrs. Sage's benevolent thought were limited in its results to the finding of comfortable, economical homes for a few scores, or even hundreds, of families, it would be a small matter. To help a few individuals is relatively unimportant.

Mrs. Sage's work, wisely carried out, will benefit hundreds of thousands, and perhaps millions, that will never see her model homes, or occupy them.

If Mrs. Sage enables a certain number of men working for $15 or $20 a week to live comfortably in the country upon their incomes, while paying a reasonable interest on the money invested in their homes, she will have rendered a great service to all the city dwellers.

Around the big cities there are room, sunlight, fresh air and green grass for the millions that are now crowded in vile, narrow streets.

Constantly improving transportation facilities make it possible for every man who will, and who has even a modest income, to take his wife and his children out of the city.

The difficulty is in making the first start. Real estate speculators, of course, are interested in getting all the money they can. Builders also are engaged in business for profit, apart from philanthropy. The man of small means has little capital, it is difficult for him to buy and build on the instalment plan, and he cannot possibly get one small piece of ground and build one small house as cheaply as the work can be done on a big scale.

Mrs. Sage is doing it on a big scale. Other capitalists, undoubtedly, will follow her successful lead, with intentions more or less philanthropic.

When all of her houses are occupied, and reliable tenants are clamoring for thousands of similar houses, the thousands of houses will be built.

It is to be hoped that Mrs. Sage will extend this work as widely as possible, and make the useful lesson as emphatic as possible. The taking of families out of the cities means the saving of children's lives, and raising the standard of citizenship and of health.

Mrs. Sage's splendid work is building a fine monument to her hard-working husband's memory, to his entire confidence in her, to her own kind heart, and to the wise counsels of those upon whom she relies.

An Editorial by a Reader

For Thinking Men, Such as This Writer, This Newspaper Is Published

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear sir—Here is an editorial for you. Like one that you recently wrote, it has to do with purpose. And as that is the mainspring of all great achievement too much attention cannot be centred on its necessity.

In a recent number of his interesting weekly review, Mr. T. P. O'Connor, the eminent Irish journalist, reviewed a reminiscent work of an English statesman and soldier. Mr. O'Connor, alert always for the smallest glint of light thrown upon a great writer, pounced upon a paragraph in which the soldier discussed a meeting with Anthony Trollope.

The soldier complimented Trollope on the splendid imagination which enabled him to create characters. "Nonsense," said Trollope, "there is no imagination to it; it is nothing but cobbler's wax." The soldier, admitting the proverbial lack of quick wit in an Englishman, wished the novelist to be more explicit. "Why, I mean," said Trollope, "that to write, all you need is to place a piece of cobbler's wax on a chair, sit on it and stick to it."

Now, of course, we know that imagination never waits upon a man just because he fastens himself to a chair with a piece of wax. Some men might sit in a chair till doomsday and still be as destitute of imagination as the wax to which they were stuck. Therefore Mr. Trollope did not by any means reveal the secret of good imaginative writing in his formula of a chair and a piece of cobbler's wax. He was merely affecting a becoming modesty in disclaiming credit for imagination.

But in one respect the idea of the cobbler's wax is valuable. It is an unromantic symbol of tenacity of purpose, without which the finest imagination is as idle as the smoke which issues from the chimney.

Trollope had the imagination to write good fiction. And it is said of him that he used to formulate his plots and develop his dialogues while out walking in the country. But if he did not have the industry to write down the workings of this imagination, the "eternally immaterial reality of his thought and emotion" would never have become the possession of mankind. Inspiration filled his mind with social pictures; the cobbler's wax took the impressions.

How many men have had an imagination that would have done great things, if it had been stuck to a chair, if it had been chained to the rock of purpose? How many of your readers to-day have an imaginative power which, if harnessed and held to its task, would bring into reality a substantial creative work?

Trollope is a splendid example of what can be accomplished by the will to achieve. He wrote every day of his life. Illness did not deter him. It is said that even when seasick while coming to America he wrote with his accustomed regularity.

He wrote by the clock. He placed his watch beside him and scribbled off his words with the regularity of the watch's tick. He wrote for a limited time at each sitting, and he calculated on a certain output per minute. No man ever before perhaps wrote with such mechanical precision. Naturally enough, as a short story writer of fame once said to me, "Some of it reads that way."

But the fact to note is that Trollope made a name and a fortune out of writing. He produced pleasant reading for thousands of people. And in accomplishing his work in life he was so well aware of the necessity of a strong purpose that he pretended to attach more value to the adhesive properties of wax than to the illuminating influence of imagination.

Flaubert, the great French stylist, also knew the value of cobbler's wax. He stuck to his chair to produce quality, as Trollope did to produce quantity. Trollope wished to create fiction. Flaubert was dominated by a passion to produce a piece of flawless art. He used to spend fifteen hours a day writing and rewriting, chiefly rewriting. He would get up in the night to change a word. Once when walking with his pupil Maupassant, the greatest of all short story writers, he called the young man's attention to a dilapidated carriage to which was attached a broken-down horse. "There is one word in the French language which describes that; go home and look it up and have it for me to-morrow," said Flaubert.

Balzac, the greatest of all novelists, also stuck to his chair. That great man, who even as a boy was sent home from school because his mind was muddled from congestion of ideas, ordered the ideas as he grew older, and poured them out into books which will live as long as the language in which he wrote. He would plan a novel as an architect plans a house. Then he would lock himself up in a room and every night at midnight he would begin to write and stick to his chair till daylight—sometimes till noon. And he never stopped till he finished his novel.

His industry in correcting and revising proofs was the despair of the printers.

Writers great and small have had to use the cobbler's wax. Only the good old Dr. Johnson succeeded in talking literature, and even that would not have been possible if the phonographic Boswell had not been well supplied with the wax.

It is a far cry from a flight of imagination to a pair of pants stuck to a chair with cobbler's wax. But as a reminder that "genius is the capacity for infinite pains," Mr. Trollope's remark will do first rate. Yours very truly,

HENRY A. HIGGINS.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK.

WELL, sed Pa, when he calm hoam the other nite, it has calm at last.

What has calm? sed Ma. You must have been running the way you puff. What is the big excitement?

It has calm, sed Pa, thay have found the North Pole. Thay reeched thare only a littel aover a year ago. Doctor Cook of Brooklyn was the gent that found it. I am going to give him a grate reseption when he cums back. YOU are going to give him a resupshun? sed Ma. Beant hand me any more of that personal entertainment stuff.

I am going to, jest the salm, sed Pa. I used to know him wen we was littel boys together. He was a grate discoverer even in them days. He discovered the swimming hole ware all the boys used to go in, & he discovered the best place for fishing trout, & he discovered the teecher's real naim, which lost her her job, beckuss she was a married woman & the skool board wanted single wimmen. She called herself Miss Maloney & her reel naim was Missus Schlotz.

How do thay reely know that he discovered the Pole? sed Ma. How is Mister Cook going to prove it?

I suppose he will bring back a surcuit, sed Pa, like a frozen fish or a peece of ice, & besides, he was always a freed of mine at skool, & I know he never foold a fe. He was the soul of honor, if he says he found the Pole, he found it.

I am not so sure, sed Ma. Lissen while I read you what sum of these grate scentists sed in this morning's paper.

Professor Rah, of Starvard: it is a glorus thing to be the first man to reech the North Pole.

Professor Bah, of Starvard: it is a glorus & good man, that is to say, if he reely got anywhare near the Pole. I cannot see how he kept the polar bears from the door, with so little food & equipment.

Professor Skiumah, of Minnesota University: All the nashun is rejoicing at the news that Dr. Cook has discovered the North Pole. I started to do it onst, but got seasick. It is a wunderful personal triumf for the grate explorer, & will make his nalm ring down the corridors of time if he reely found the Pole, wich I have grave reasons to dout. I cannot bring myself to believe that wen me & Peary failed, a man from Brooklyn cud go up thare & bring hoam the bacon.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt: I am sorry I cuilm to Afriky instead of finding the Pole myself. I am not sure that he has found it yet, however. I understand that it is up on a hill, and I am the only goat equipped with the wind & currage to climb a hill as it shud be climbed. I hoap Mister Cook doesnt land in Amerika at the salm time as I do. That wud be a tragedy.

Professor Flimflee, of Chicago University: I do not believe thare is any such person as Dr. Cook. I do not believe that he ever discovered the Pole. I do not believe that thare is a North Pole.

Professor Cornbeel, of Quincetion: It hardly seems possibel that a man so lacking in the sterling qualities wich has always marked me in my explorashuns, a man like Dr. Cook, cud ever git near enuff to the Pole to see it with a strong spyglass. It is a grate achievement, if he did any achieeving. They will have to show me.

Professor Smythe, of Vassar: My goodness, gurls, what do you think? Mister Cook has found that terribul North Pole. Honest to goodness, gurls, I think it is one of those horrid fairtchelses.

Well, sed Ma, what do you think of that?

They are all jellus, sed Pa, the whole bunch of em. I am going to have my reseption lest the nalm, if you deant mind. I deont mind, sed Ma, if you will promise not to sing.
